Two Princeton Attorneys Want to Force Immediate Special Gubernatorial Election

Two Princeton attorneys are calling for Gov. James McGreevey's resignation to be effective immediately, in order to set the stage for a special election that would halt the handing over of executive power to State Senate President Richard Codey (D-West Orange).

The attorneys, Bruce Atran and Carl Mayer, have filed a suit with Judge Garrett Brown in federal court to effectively force a special election. They contend that Gov. McGreevey's announcement 13 days ago stating his intention to resign effective November 15 should be strictly interpreted so that a special election could be held, allowing political parties to put forth chosen candidates.

Amid swirling controversy about illegal fundraising, Gov. McGreevey announced that he would resign after admitting to having extramarital relations with another man. While the governor has not revealed any names, the man at the center of the controversy is Golan Cipel, a onetime state homeland security advisor.

Mr. Atran, a Green Party candidate for the U.S. Senate in 2000, argued that Gov. McGreevey's August 12 announcement stating his intention to step down on November 15, itself "triggers a vacancy" and should subsequently spark a special election.

"Does he have to leave office now in the event of a special election? He doesn't," Mr. Atran said. "As long as he has announced his resignation before September 3 as a final act, it triggers a vacancy, and that's an important point."

Under state law, if the governor were to step down before September 3, or 60 days before the November election, it would force a special election.

Mr. Atran pointed to "at least" five states that have undergone similar scenarios.

"It's a widespread legal conclusion that if you resign effective several months later, so long as your resignation is certain and final, it triggers a special election," he said.

Mr. Atran cited as an example the late former Illinois U.S. Senator Paul

Hospital Task Force Chooses Consultant

A professional consultant has been chosen to assist the Princeton Health Care Task Force in exploring the feasibility of either increasing the capability of the current hospital facility at 253 Witherspoon Street or completely moving it to an off-site location, possibly outside of Princeton, as part of a comprehensive campus that would comprise all functions of Princeton Healthcare System.

In a press conference yesterday at Borough Hall, Prof. Alan Sager was introduced as the independent consultant who will oversee and offer data collected from the hospital's findings and from community feedback. He is currently director of the Masters of Public Health program in Boston University's Health Services Department. Prof. Sager is also the director of the Health Reform Program at the University's School of Public Health.

The task force looked for an independent consultant with the aid of a grant received from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation that provides $5,000 for assistance in analysis of the hospital's recently-released strategic plan based on information to be received from future public forums, and for a written report based on various findings submitted to the members of the task force.

According to Task Force Chairman Marvin Reed, Prof. Sager has thus far spent most of his time talking with members of the task force, community representatives, and with Barry Rabner, president and CEO of Princeton HealthCare System.

"He's going to go back and digest what he's absorbed and then acquire more details about what he's doing," Mr. Reed said.

Once he has completed his findings, Prof. Sager will take part in an open hearing on Wednesday, September 29 at 7:30 p.m. at Township Hall to address what is at stake regarding the hospital's future. That

Borough Approves Plaza Expenditures; Cost of Furnishings Falls Under Budget

Furnishings for the Borough's new plaza outside the Princeton Public Library will total approximately $85,000, more than $15,000 under the Borough's original budget. Passed unanimously at Council's meeting Monday night, the budget will pay for chairs, tables, wooden benches, planters, trash receptacles, bicycle racks, and tree grates.

As a tribute to Albert Einstein, the 12 tree grates, totalling $57,000, or $4,750 per grate, will be in the shape of the carbon atom. The Plaza Art Committee chose to purchase these specially-designed grates after Princeton University donated $150,000 to enhance the quality of the plaza's furnishings. Originally the Borough had set aside $102,500 for plaza furnishings, along with an additional $4,000 in contingency funds. The University's donation replaced this money.

"I think the tree grates will bring a fascinating feel to the square," said Wendy Benchley, Council's liaison

Republican Candidate in the Township Vies for a More 'Participatory' Committee

When Irene White moved here in 1983, Princeton was pretty much Republican. Committeeman William Cherry and Mayor Winthrop Pike edged out now-Committeeman Bernie Miller and candidate Eleanor Lewis, and the Township retained the Republican status quo.

But that was 1983.

"Things have sure changed," said Ms. White, a Republican looking to fill a seat to be vacated by current Committeewoman Casey Hegener when her term expires in January.

A Cedar Lane resident and a former administrator in the medical division at Johnson & Johnson, Ms. White said that her background in dealing with division budgets gives her insight about how to "properly" spend Township monies. She also contended that general Republican practices, overall, dictate more "responsible" spending.

"It's runaway spending," she said, citing costs incurred by daily maintenance of the Township's open space sites, and what she sees as a "lack" of rateables, or tax-generating facilities, throughout the Township.

Specifically, she referred to spending involved in the construction of the $11.8 million Township Municipal Complex that opened in 2002, saying a building that size was not necessary.

"I think that's a cost overrun that has to be explained," she said.

"All of these things have happened in the last couple of years [and] I'm concerned with the Township's rising debt load," she said, pointing out that it "will come back to haunt us over the years."

Considering the various commissions and municipal departments the Township shares with the Borough, she added, she did not want to see it share the Borough's current financial difficulties.

An issue underscoring Ms. White's overall message was a wish to preserve the character of the Township by reinforcing the general conception of a quiet, tree-lined, residential companion to the more urban Borough.

"I think our character is unique and I think we need to develop a long-range plan to handle our traffic," she said, adding that increased traffic and development on the town's periphery "could affect us, be it through flooding, sewage, or overcrowding."

In the primary election held this past June, the two Republican candidates were outvoted by nearly a five-to-one margin. Ms. White is aware of the uphill battle she faces in a town where there are more registered Democratic voters than Republican.

"Talking on a local level, I think Republicans have a tendency to be more business oriented, more conservative, and overall more fiscally responsible," she said, describing what her party affiliation could bring to the table.

Like the Democrat and Republican candidates who have preceded her, Ms. White also said she worries about the often low resident turnout at Committee meetings and said she would use internet and mailers as methods of getting residents more involved.

But does the local political arena lend itself to the defining elements that often constitute party affiliation? Are deer, traffic, and construction partisan issues? Ms. White said party affiliation does apply to these situations, by adding a wider range of opinions to Committee.

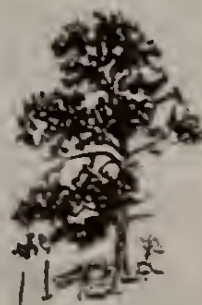

"The deer don't know that I'm a Republican or a Democrat, [but] I feel very strongly that we need a two-party system, and I want to underscore that. I'd like to approach the job simply by preserving the Princeton that I love," she said.

Princeton Students Travel to Brazil, Place Second in Short Film Competition

While many college students spend the summer living at home with their families and working at a summer job to save up some cash for school, others plan vacations with friends to places such as the shore, a theme park, or maybe even a hot and sunny island.

Princeton University students Jessica Inocencio, Andrew McConnon, Ben Eachus, and Greg Marx had the ultimate summer vacation this year, when they traveled to Sao Paulo, Brazil for a week in July. Unlike many of their friends, all their vacation expenses were paid for by technology competition for high school and college students all over the world.

Funded by Microsoft, Imagine Cup began three years ago as a software design competition, and then expanded to allow students to use other outlets to express themselves creatively through technology.

TOPICS Of the Town

Each category of the competition this year highlighted a different blend of technology and art, according to the competition's website (www.imaginecup.com). The four categories of the competition were software design; rendering an interactive animation program; an algorithm competition of brain teasers; and a short film competition in which students had to create a video of eight minutes or less explaining the students' perspective on the culture of innovation.

The top five groups in each of the four categories were invited to Brazil to participate in the finals. Those finalists included Jessica, a junior art and archaeology major, Greg, a freshman undeclared major, and Andrew and Ben, both juniors and art history majors. The four Princeton students were the only American group to place in any of the four competitions, earning second place in the short film category and walking away with not only a free week-long trip to Brazil, but a $4,000 prize.

Jessica first applied for the competition last year after learning about it from one of her video professors. As Princeton University doesn't have a department specific to film, Jessica contacted friends of hers that she knew had a keen interest in video production to see who would like to create an entry along with her.

For Ben and Andrew, who had written film scripts together in the past, this was an opportunity to take something on paper and transform it into a film for the first time, said Ben: "I was pretty sure I was interested in pursuing something in film before, but this really solidified it for me."

What made this group of students stand out from other students who may have had a similar interest in the competition was Jessica's access to film equipment. With her own video camera and editing equipment on her computer, it made the entire process much easier, she said.

However, as rewarding as the final product was, she found it tough to get the project done while also juggling schoolwork and completing the required junior project at Princeton.

"I was skeptical ... but not so much that it prevented us from [entering the competition]," said Jessica.

Calling themselves Split-Level Productions, the group decided to make the subject of their project the evolution of dance as a social metaphor. Or, as explained by Microsoft in an award citation, "a short film epitomizing the ideals and mores governing the 1950s social relationships of suburban youth. The film — through improvisational dance routines — addresses how these ideals have transformed over the years."

The group started by contacting dance groups on campus to see if any would like to be involved in the making of the video. Members of Princeton's Sympoth (break dancing), Raks Odalisque (belly dancing), BodyHype, Black Arts Company, and Expressions (hip hop groups) turned out for the filming of the video. The dancing was performed impromptu, to make it seem more natural, said Jessica.

Starting with footage of the proper etiquette expected at a formal dance function in the 1950s, the film then cuts to a modern scene of guys and girls meeting each other outside an elevator, and commencing to dance together.

"The girls initiated the dancing, which is very different than how it was in the 1950s," said Jessica. "We wanted to express the changes in gender roles and the informality of dance today."

The format of the video appeared to work, since the group's film was selected by judges to become one of the final 30 entries. Each video was judged by Microsoft in three categories: the relevance of video to the topic, the overall quality of the video, and an essay written by the group to accompany the video. Through a public vote on Imagine Cup's website the film competition was then narrowed down to five groups, who then travelled to Brazil for the finals.

Being able to travel to Brazil and meet students from all over the world was the most rewarding part of the experience, said Ben: "The best part was just interacting with the other teams."

Other countries that travelled to Brazil for the short film competition finals included Romania, which placed first, Germany and Canada, which both tied for third, and runners-up China and Romania. Students involved in the other competitions came from France, Russia, Greece, Lithuania, Belgium, and Bulgaria.

The teams were all brought together in various social settings while in Brazil, including watching a performance by Brazilian dancers, and flying to Iguacu Falls, on the border of Argentina and Paraguay. Imagine Cup also held a screening for the students, where they were able to see each other's film entries.

"It was really great to talk to them and to see what they did [for their projects]," said Ben.

At the end, a formal awards ceremony was held for the students, where CEOs from Microsoft applauded the work that each student put into his or her project.

Overall, it was a great summer vacation, and an eye-opening experience for these four aspiring filmmakers, said Jessica, who plans to use her share of the winnings to buy more filming equipment.

"I'm never going to doubt myself creatively again," she said.

Arts Council Announces Fall Classes for All Ages

The Arts Council of Princeton has announced fall classes for adults, children and teens.

For adults, there are a variety of new painting classes. Offered for the first time this fall is a course in intermediate oil painting taught jointly by skilled painters Lisa Salamandra, who is academically trained, and Thibaud Thiercelin, who is completely self-taught. They will instruct in the technique, preparation, and expressive qualities of oils through a hands-on exploration of masters and movements. There are also courses in beginning oil painting; advanced oil painting, which focuses on the head, hands, and musculature; beginning and intermediate acrylic painting; and watercolor, both for beginners and for those who want to concentrate on the figure.

The Arts Council also offers beginning and intermediate ceramics classes, with a focus on techniques used in hand-building, wheel throwing, glazing, or any combination. Those wishing to concentrate solely on basic glazing can sign up for a one-day workshop. Classes, which are limited to six students to ensure individual attention, include hands-on studio time and responsive instruction so that students can develop at their own pace.

Also offered are a figure drawing class, as well as an open figure drawing workshop every Monday evening of the year; a one-day "Focus on Motif Collage" workshop with author and illustrator Dar Hosta; beginning and intermediate black and white photography; and beginning Flamenco dancing.

For both novice and experienced writers, the Arts Council offers a guided creative writing group, a supportive setting in which to read one's work.

For children and teens, the Arts Council offers ceramics classes for ages 5 to 7, 8 to 12, and 13 and up. Each age group will focus on the sculptural aspects of clay through hand building, and the latter two groups will also experiment with throwing on the potter's wheel. Small class sizes ensure individual attention.

For novice photographers, the Arts Council has courses in beginner and intermediate black and white photography for ages 10 to 15. The classes will give students a better understanding of film speed, light meters, and developing techniques. Course fees include use of the darkroom and darkroom chemistry.

For those interested in mixed media and a fresh cultural perspective, a new class called "Art Around the World" is available for ages 9 to 12. This ten-week study of art from other cultures will include paintings, drawing, sculpture, printing, and papermaking.

"Big Deal," another new mixed media class, shifts toward large-scale sculptures and paintings for ages 8 to 11. Students will look at past artists, get tips on making big public sculptures, and work on their own pieces at their own pace.

For ages 6 to 8, the Arts Council offers a new drawing class, "Perceptual Skills for Drawing Realistically," with exercises from Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain by Dr. Betty Edwards. Other new and old favorites include "Brush Up," an introductory painting class for ages 9 to 13; "Drawing from Imagination and Reality," for teens from 13 to 18; and "Introductory Drawing," also for teens.

The popular "Communi-verses for Middle Schoolers" is back, with Princeton University students on hand to help participants develop writing skills. New this fall is a writing workshop for teens in which students from grades 9 through 12 will concentrate on prose skills, critique, and techniques for honing one's work.

A one-day parent and child workshop tailored to children ages 3 to 5 will be taught by children's book author and illustrator Dar Hosta. "Animals, Animals!" will use painting and collage to enable each child to create their favorite animal.

Arts Council dramatist-in-residence Pam Hoffman is offering three drama classes: "Creating Stories: Discovery," with one class for age 4 and one for grades K through 1, and "Creating Theatre: Ideas," for grades 2 through 4. Both classes approach stories and drama through acting, movement, music, visual arts, and, most important, imagination.

Early registration is encouraged since classes fill up quickly. For further information or to register call (609) 924-8777 or visit the website at www.artscouncilofprinceton.org.

Princeton Writers Block, Near Completion, Hosted Chamber of Commerce Mixer

With sunflowers and cornstalks shooting skyhigh on a classic dogday afternoon, the newly-completed Princeton Writers Block along Paul Robeson Place was the scene of a Princeton Chamber of Commerce networking gathering. Such an event, Writers Block organizers say, exemplifies the purpose of the outdoor garden.

Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and the Borough Merchants of Princeton, the Thursday mixer was organized to provide a chance for members from area businesses to gather, exchange ideas, and take in the scene that has slowly but subtly begun to attract the attention of passers-by.

"When I came out here for the first time, I thought the concept was so wonderful, and that [the organizers] were allowed to do this here," said Kristen Appelget, president of the Chamber, adding that the garden is "an example of great things that can happen in small, urban spaces."

The brainchild of landscape artist Peter Soderman and architect Kevin Wilkes, the Writers Block was built to showcase the combination of literature and architecture that characterizes the Princeton community. Eleven "follies," a term used for garden structures in 18th- and 19th-century England, have been completed employing the talents of local architects using designs inspired by the various styles and concepts associated with the writers.

Mr. Wilkes, for example, based his vision on the works of retired Princeton University professor and Civil War historian James McPherson. Some other writer/architect folly "teams" include: Peter Benchley and Andrew Outerbridge; Joyce Carol Oates and Gil Remy; Paul Krugman and Ron Berlin; and Paul Sigmund and John James Rivera.

All of the follies will be auctioned off once the garden's season ends at the end of October. The proceeds will be donated to charity.

The land for the garden, which is the future site of about 97 luxury apartments, was a temporary donation from Palmer Square to Messrs. Wilkes and Soderman. The total cost, which was paid for out-of-pocket by the two organizers, is estimated to be about $27,000.

While all programming has yet to be solidified, Writers Block organizers hope to include not only community events but readings by some of the authors involved. Prof. McPherson is already slated for an appearance, but has yet to finalize a date.

To plan an event or to contact organizers, visit www.princetonwritersblock.com.

public forum had originally been scheduled for September 15.

Prof. Sager remained tentative in speculating about his findings, saying that he will have a "better sense" of the hospital's situation in a month, around the time of the public forum, adding that the situation is "as complex as it is important."

The newly-hired consultant said that though he's been on the job only a few days, he's already "acquired the sense of the breadth of the problem and the range of the issues involved and now we'll have a chance to go into depth in all the relevant areas."

Prof. Sager's name first came up in discussions between Township Mayor Phyllis Marchand, Borough

Mayor Joe O'Neill, and members of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

"It was the agreement that this was precisely the kind of person that we would need," said Mayor O'Neill.

Prof. Sager said so far in his studies he has tracked over 1,200 other cases of hospitals closing and that while each case was "unique," this particular situation featured complexities that "may be a little above average."

"Hundreds of hospitals have closed in the United States in recent decades, and the challenges of sustaining a high-quality hospital are as great as their importance to local communities," he said.

Released earlier this summer, Princeton HealthCare System's strategic plan attached a $230 million price tag to building a new campus, with about $15 million required to attain the land needed to accommodate such facilities. PHCS estimates a cost of $180 to $190 million to expand its current facilities on Witherspoon Street.

PHCS has targeted up to 15 sites in the area where a potential campus could be built.

The Health Care Task Force, which was established earlier this year, includes, along with Task Force Chairman former Borough Mayor Marvin Reed, Mayors Marchand and O'Neill, members of Borough Council and Township Committee, the hospital's Mr. Rabner, and members of the Princeton Regional Planning Board and the Borough and Township Zoning Boards.

Yoga & Health Center Offers Free Samples For New Students

The Princeton Center for Yoga & Health is marking its eighth anniversary by offering free classes to first-time visitors the week of September 7. Returning students are welcome to sample classes at the typical drop-in fee: $15 for most classes, $18 for Hot Yoga.

There will be some 35 weekly classes and 35 workshops offered this fall. Among the class offerings are Mom/Baby Yoga, for mothers with babies aged from four weeks to six months. Mothers can get in shape while bonding with their babies. Classes meet on Thursdays from 11:15 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The fee is $80 for four weeks. Drop-ins are welcome.

A class in pre-natal yoga where participants learn breathing techniques for relaxation, energy conservation, and mental focus is offered on Saturdays from 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon. The fee is $80 for four weeks, $75 pre-paid, and drop-ins are welcome.

Other specialty classes include Yoga for Stress Reduction, Pilates Mat Classes, Hot Yoga, Feldenkrais, Guided Meditation, Tai Chi for Arthritis, Yogilates, and Quick Fit Power Pilates.

First among upcoming workshops is one on Communal Clearing with Jeanette Schwartz on Saturday, September 11, from 7 to 9 p.m. Although there is no fee, donations are welcome. A holistic practitioner with experience in Feng Shui and Numerology, Ms. Schwartz will lead the community in a traditional Space and Spirit Clearing, a healing ritual that honors the deceased and provides inspiration to those who live with their memory. The evening also includes an exercise in cleansing breath, a guided chakra balancing meditation, and an invocation and interactive fire cleansing ceremony to release what is in the past. The evening will conclude with a renewing ritual involving crystals and sharing of food, drink, and conversations with neighbors. Those participating are encouraged to bring food they love to share.

Also on September 11 is a workshop called Partner Yoga in which participants work together to put new balance into their relationship while developing a new dimension in communication and trust. The workshop is led by Elaine Dembe-Fox and runs from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., with a $40 fee per pair ($35 if paid by September 9).

On Sunday, September 12, from 1 to 2:30 p.m., a free workshop will explore Kabbalah and creativity. Dan Antman will introduce Kabbalistic cosmology, outline some of the basic theories of creation, and teach a Kabbalistic meditation technique. A special four-week session begins in October.

From 1 to 5 p.m. on the same Sunday, Jane Martin and Dr. Ed Zullo will lead a workshop in breath therapy that will also be offered on October 10 and November 14. The fee is $65 for each session and pre-registration is strongly encouraged.

The Center for Yoga & Health is presenting a special concert from 7 to 9 p.m. on Sunday, September 19, featuring Dave Stringer, who has been profiled in Time, Billboard, In Style, and Yoga Journal as a leader of the new American kirtan movement. Kirtan is from the Sanskrit word for singing. Mr. Stringer will also be conducting a workshop earlier the same day, from 2 to 4 p.m., for those who want to learn kirtan, to introduce chanting into yoga classes, to establish a daily chanting practice, or to deepen their experience and understanding of chanting. Fee for the workshop is $35 ($30 if paid by September 10). For the concert, the charge is $18 ($15 if paid by September 10).

The Princeton Center for Yoga & Health is located in the Montgomery Professional Center, 50 Vreeland Drive, Suite 506 in Skillman. For further information, call (609) 924-7294 or visit www.princeton-yoga.com.

Good Time Charley's in Kingston Bought by a Steakhouse Chain

Good Time Charley's, located on Route 27 in Kingston, will soon be turned over to Charlie Brown's Steakhouse, an area chain restaurant. While Charley's owner, Merrill Zinder, is unsure of the exact date that the restaurant's ownership will change, it is expected to happen within the next few weeks.

Good Time Charley's employees, of which there are now 75, will most likely remain once the ownership changes, said Mr. Zinder: "[The broker] told me that they're going to keep the staff."

Any parties that have previously been booked with Good Time Charley's will be honored, along with the menu and prices that were promised, said the owner.

Once building permits go through, the restaurant's new owner "will be making some changes," said Mr. Zinder. "It will still run as Good Time Charley's until it's remodelled," he added.

Although unaware how long remodeling will take, Mr. Zinder said that the restaurant will keep its menu and prices until the work is complete.

The restaurant will stay open during remodeling, as a crew will be coming in to work on the facility between midnight and 10 a.m., said the owner.

"They will definitely not close," he said.

After meeting with representatives from Charlie Brown's on Friday, Mr. Zinder said that his restaurant will become the biggest of all of the Charlie Brown chains, and will have the biggest banquet facility.

Charley's grill bar, which seats approximately 45 customers, will stay as is, said Mr. Zinder. However the original, small bar in the middle of the restaurant will be turned into a salad bar, he said.

A representative from Charlie Brown's did not return calls made by Town Topics before press time.

Opened in Kingston by Mr. Zinder in 1969, the first Good Time Charley's was followed by three more restaurants in 1972. In total, Mr. Zinder has owned seven Good Time Charley's restaurants, of which only Charley's Other Brother, on Rt. 537 in Eastampton Township, will remain.

Mr. Zinder will continue as owner of the latter, although his plans now include "retiring to Florida."

When asked why he has chosen to sell the restaurant's Kingston location, Mr. Zinder said: "I'm 75 years old; I'm tired."

Charlie Brown's Steakhouse has locations in North, Central, and South New Jersey, as well as New York and Pennsylvania. The chain most recently opened two stores in Pennsylvania, in Langhorne, by Oxford Valley Mall, and in Berwyn.

Other Charlie Brown's in Central New Jersey include locations in Edison, Alpha, Woodbridge, Green Brook, Highland Park, Hillsborough, Scotch Plains, and Union.

Police Blotter

Wanted on Warrants, Six Are Apprehended By Borough Officers

Outstanding warrants led to the arrests last week of five men and one woman in Princeton Borough.

On August 16, Sgt. Chris Quaste of the Borough Police Department stopped Ronderrick L. Manuel, 31, of Trenton, for a motor vehicle violation on Nassau Street, then learned that Mr. Manuel was wanted by Trenton Police on warrants totalling $13,705. It also transpired that the passenger in the car, Alkhiem Lewis, 27, also of Trenton, was wanted on warrants from the Lawrence Township Police Department. Both men were arrested and turned over, respectively, to the Trenton and Lawrence Township Police Departments, where they were held in default of bail.

Earlier that day, another Trenton resident, Nicole S. Thompson, 30, was taken into custody at Princeton Borough Municipal Court after police determined that she was wanted on active motor vehicle and criminal warrants from Trenton. She was released after posting bail of $789.

On August 17, at 8:26 a.m., a motor vehicle stop on Evelyn Place led to the arrest of Melvin Thompson, 37, of Scotch Plains, for operating his automobile with a suspended license. He was subsequently found to be wanted on warrants from South Plainfield totalling $962. He was released after posting bail. Four hours later, the same arresting officer, Ptl. Sean Cahill, stopped a Princeton man on Palmer Square whom he knew to be wanted on a warrant from Newark Municipal Court. Jimmy C. Wells, 21, of Maple Terrace, was taken to Police Headquarters and released after posting bail on the warrant of $750.

Also arrested on an active warrant was an East Windsor man, Brandt A. Tingen, 19, on August 19. Stopped for failing to keep right on Nassau Street, he was then found to be wanted by the Upper Freehold Municipal Court. He, too, was released on bail.

A gas main break at the intersection of University Place and Dickinson Street forced the evacuation of Princeton University's Foulke and Henry Halls on August 19. A subsequent investigation revealed that a worker from a concrete company in Old Bridge had accidentally struck a 16-inch gas main while excavating near the University campus. Personnel from the Princeton Fire Department, Princeton First Aid and Rescue Squad, and Borough Police Department all responded to the emergency. PSE&G eventually shut off the gas leak. There were no reported injuries.

Carmen Crea Jr., 34, of Highland Park, was charged with disorderly conduct, obstruction of justice, and bias intimidation following a late-night altercation on Nassau Street on August 22. According to police, the accused man, who was engaged in an argument when they arrived, then became uncooperative and disorderly, in the process making racially insensitive comments to his Hispanic victim. After being placed under arrest and taken to police headquarters, he became combative, sustaining minor self-inflicted contusions and abrasions. He was later released to the custody of a family member and issued a summons for a September 13 court date.

Two Dell GX50 computers, valued at $2,000, were reported stolen from the staff lounge at Princeton High School on August 18. There were no signs of forced entry into the locked office, police said, adding that the thefts apparently took place sometime between June 23 and August 15. There are no suspects.

Three minors from Princeton were arrested for possession of alcohol shortly before 3 a.m. on August 19, after the car in which they were traveling was stopped for a violation on Lovers Lane. Greg Conocenti, 18, of Russell Road; Jason Hopkins, 18, of Wilkinson Way; and an unidentified 17-year-old Township resident were all released with summonses to appear in court on August 23.

A speeding ticket led to the arrest of Guy Rivers, 46, of Trenton, on August 17, after the arresting officer noticed a crack pipe in the accused man's car. Mr. Rivers was charged with possession of drug paraphernalia and given an August 30 court date.

PORTRAIT OF AN ARTIST: Captured by a photographer at last year's Princeton Academy Paint Out, a painter puts some finishing touches on his contribution to the event. The 2004 Paint Out will be held on October 23 on the campus at 101 Drakes Corner Road.

Fire Wire

The Princeton Fire Department has reported the following activity for the week ending August 22:

In addition to numerous false or malfunctioning fire alarm systems, the department answered a call for a car leaking fuel at Palmer Square on Wednesday evening, August 18. Absorbent was applied to the roadway, which prevented gasoline from entering the storm drain.

Ongoing construction on University Place caused a gas main to break on Thursday, August 19. Crews secured the scene and evacuated nearby buildings until PSE&G could contain the leak.

Later that day, residents of Hodge Road reported smelling smoke in their home. First arriving companies noted that the area smelled strongly of burning wood and found a haze in the windless night air. After searching the nearby areas for a source, crews determined the cause to be a controlled bonfire in the rear yard of a Boudinot Street residence.

Midday on Friday, August 20, the department responded to a motor vehicle accident at Harrison Street and Hamilton Avenue. First responders found one car completely off of the roadway with smoke showing from the engine compartment. The other vehicle involved was leaking fluids which were diverted from a nearby storm drain.

Saturday's storm system caused a tree on Wendover Drive to down electrical, phone and cable wires. Crews secured the scene until utility companies could make their repairs.

Safety Fact of the Week

Cooking equipment and unsafe cooking practices cause the largest number of home fires and home injuries. However, fires started by smoking materials caused 26 percent of the home fire deaths in 1999. Smoking has consistently been the leading cause of home fire deaths in the U.S.

Anyone interested in volunteering with the Princeton Fire Department should call (609) 497-7645, or (609) 731-1314.

Painters and Public Invited to Paint Out

The Princeton Academy's Second Annual Paint Out will be held on October 23 on the campus of the Princeton Academy of the Sacred Heart. Both artists and the public are invited to the event.

Over 40 local artists working in oils, pastel, watercolor, pencil and acrylic participated in the 2003 Paint Out. Twenty-four middle school art students, together with their teacher, also participated.

Princeton Academy is an independent Catholic school for boys. According to Headmaster Olen Kalkus, "The building of community is a goal of Sacred Heart Schools" and the Paint Out "is just one demonstration of our commitment to that mission."

"I envisioned the Paint Out as a way to bring painting alive for our students," said Sandra Tasca, Princeton Academy parent and event founder. "It is too easy to dismiss painting as an arcane or outmoded method of depicting the world when in fact it is so alive and vibrant. Last year's Paint Out demonstrated the fabulous experience observing the creation of a work of art can be."

The Paint Out takes place on the 43-acre campus of Princeton Academy. The grounds include a 22,000 sq. ft. Manor House designed by the well-known architect Rolf Bauhan and built in an eclectic Gothic style. The campus contains other scenic areas, including a grotto, a stone gazebo, a formal garden with fountain, meadows and woods.

There are no fees for artists who wish to participate in the Paint Out. They are welcome to arrive as early as 6 a.m. Painting will conclude at 4 p.m. Painters will be treated to coffee, tea and breakfast snacks; burgers, cookies, and a drink at lunch; and a wine and cheese closing reception beginning at 4:30 p.m. Held in the Manor House, the reception will also be the venue for a silent auction of the paintings completed that day.

This year, in addition to the People's Choice Award of $100, artists will have the opportunity to take home a limited number of prizes donated by local art supply vendors. Several well-known arts organizations will be represented, including the Garden State Watercolor Society, The Salmagundi Club of New York, and the New York Plein Air Painters.

The public is invited to stroll through the campus during Paint Out hours and observe the artists at work. In addition, all are invited to attend the silent auction in the Manor House. It will begin at 4:30 and end at 6 p.m.

Princeton Academy is located at 101 Drakes Corner Road, at the intersection of The Great Road.

For further information or to register for the event, contact Sandra Tasca at (609) 333-9411 or sandra@sandrataasca.com.

Voter Registration Drive Scheduled In an Effort to Increase Turnout

Steve Gordon, Youth Services coordinator for Princeton Human Services, said that with this being a "big" election year, voter awareness is paramount, especially among young people facing the first presidential election where they are eligible to vote.

The Youth Center Committee, Princeton Human Services, and the League of Women Voters are sponsoring a voter registration drive this Saturday from noon to 3 p.m. on Nassau Street at Palmer Square in an attempt to "get out the vote" for an election, that according to the latest poll numbers, could once again be a dead heat.

"Registering voters means getting more people to the polls," Mr. Gordon said, adding that he hopes to get "at least" 20 to 30 people registered, with the hope of including younger people and Latinos in the drive.

Mr. Gordon said he will solicit young people at the Princeton Record Exchange, and Small World Coffee in his effort to bring potential voters to Palmer Square this Saturday.

He added that those interested in registering should bring valid forms of identification.

Mr. Gordon also stressed that "it's the kids that are running it."

"It's non-partisan. Whatever your views are, just come out and register," he said.

Princeton University Ranks Number One

The latest issue of U.S. News & World Report ranking of America's best colleges placed Princeton University at the top of the list.

The magazine ranked Princeton first, tied with Harvard University, in the "national university-doctoral" category, which includes research universities offering a full range of undergraduate majors plus master's and Ph.D. programs. The University was also ranked number one for least debt incurred by students after graduation and number two for best value.

While Princeton officials said they were pleased to be recognized as one of many outstanding universities, they stressed that the methodology in this report and similar surveys cannot capture the distinctiveness of any institution or whether one or another university might be an appropriate match for any individual student.

LEGAL FORUM

Protecting Your Property in the Age of Redevelopment, New Schools, and Public Benefit

The government's power of eminent domain is being used to condemn private property for the construction of new schools in 31 "special needs" school districts known as "Abbott districts" as well as for a variety of redevelopment projects. When your rights to private property clash with the government's authority to act for the benefit of the public, ignorance of the law can be costly.

In 2002, New Jersey created the New Jersey School Construction Corporation ("SCC") who, along with the New Jersey Department of Education, is working with school districts to manage the construction of new schools. This is a project expected to cost approximately $6 billion. In order to build new schools, the SCC must acquire land by negotiating a voluntary purchase from property owners. If these negotiations fail, the SCC will file condemnation actions to force the taking of property. In most cases, a property owner will be unable to challenge the government's right to take the property since construction of a public school provides a valuable benefit to the public. However, a property owner does have the right to challenge and negotiate "just compensation" for the property and should consider retaining an experienced appraiser and attorney for assistance.

Prior to filing a lawsuit to take private property, the government must first try to purchase the property from the owner through bona fide negotiations. The government will retain an appraiser to determine the value of the property at its "highest and best use", and use the appraised value as its initial offer for the property. A prudent owner will seek the assistance of an attorney who will use an independent appraiser to evaluate the government's offer, and negotiate "just compensation" for the property. Recently I settled a case immediately before trial where the government's appraisal of my client's property was $100,000 and the property owner's appraisal was $5.2 million. Factors such as comparable sales, potential uses of the property, and market conditions must be addressed in order to make certain the property owner is paid the full value for their property.

Property value is not the only issue in some cases - environmental contamination situations may arise. Many Abbott districts are located in older industrial cities and school construction may require the acquisition of complexes with environmental problems. It is possible that environmental clean-up costs could be deducted from your compensation.

Redevelopment plans present a entirely different set of challenges to property owners because the line between private and public benefit is not always clear. A municipality may designate certain portions of the town as redevelopment zones and present plans that call for private property to be acquired. Some high profile redevelopment plans are located in Asbury Park and Camden. Outdated or deteriorating buildings are said to create a "blighting influence" on a neighborhood. Many redevelopment plans are now being challenged by property owners who disagree with the government's assessment of their neighborhood, and feel the primary beneficiaries of redevelopment plans are the new property owners. The procedure to challenge a redevelopment plan is beyond the scope of this article, but any property owner whose property is being considered for inclusion in a redevelopment plan should obtain a copy of the plan before its is adopted and consult with an attorney to discuss their available options.

"Committee of Nine" Is Congratulated For Their Effort on Arts Council Project

To the Editor:

Last spring, Princeton Future set up a new process to help resolve the Arts Council expansion issues. It invited three representatives each from the Arts Council, the Witherspoon-Jackson Neighborhood Association, and Princeton Future, a "Committee of Nine," to work together. The new process worked.

We write to say "thank you" to the hardworking members of that Committee — Wendy Mager, Doretta Galucci and Janet Stern of the Arts Council; Hendricks Davis, Joanna Kendig, and Willie Mae Tadlock of the Witherspoon-Jackson Neighborhood Association; and Susan Hockaday Jones, Nicholas Katzenbach, and Yina Moore of Princeton Future. They have set a model for this town.

As a result, Princeton Future declared in June: "We support the Regional Planning Board's approval of the application of the Arts Council. Princeton Future is very pleased that the Arts Council produced a re-designed building which is much more responsive to the concerns of the neighborhood."

The final wording of the conditions, expected before the end of the summer, is still critical, as it will outline and facilitate the management of the impact mitigation measures.

We encourage the Arts Council and the Witherspoon-Jackson Neighborhood Association to continue to work together on these conditions and on the implementation of the agreements reached through the Princeton Future process.

Now, because there remain areas of no agreement between the Witherspoon-Jackson Neighborhood Association and the Arts Council that pertain to better ways to address impacts, we urge the Regional Planning Board, as it spells out the conditions of its approval, to pay careful attention to what has been so well initiated by the Committee of Nine.

The role of Princeton Future has been to facilitate the conversation. The Committee of Nine succeeded. The results are historic.

A Township Committee Candidate Asks: Can We Discuss Issues Over Coffee?

To the Editor:

My name is Paul Kapp and I, along with Irene White, am a Republican candidate for Township Committee. As candidates for Township Committee one of our goals is to meet residents and understand their concerns about our home, Princeton Township.

I would like to invite every Township resident regardless of political predisposition to meet us and discover whether we are the type of people you will vote into office in November. The added benefit is that we will gain an understanding of what issues and concerns are most important to the majority of Township residents. Please join Irene and me for coffee in the Café of Bon Appetit in the Princeton Shopping Center on Tuesday mornings at 9 a.m. If this time proves inconvenient, or if evenings are more appropriate for you, Irene and I are open to other times and other places.

If we are fortunate enough to be elected to the Township Committee, we are willing to continue these meetings throughout our term in office. What better way to make sure your concerns are known and heard?

If you are unable to attend any of these get-togethers but are still interested in learning more about Irene or me as candidates, please call Irene at (609) 924-8832 or me at (609) 683-9679, or e-mail me at kklct@patmedia.net.

Proposed Jazz Club on Bayard Lane Belongs in Trenton or New Brunswick

To the Editor:

Since my wife and I live within 200 feet of the proposed "jazz club" construction and like many others were not notified about it, I should like to make two observations.

First, jazz died an unhappy death about 1960. Whatever would be pounding out of the proposed "club" in the small hours would not be jazz.

Second, the developer's comment that the larger community needs a "jazz club" located halfway between Philadelphia and New York City is absurd in light of Princeton's status as a very small town. The "club" needs to go into a city — Trenton or New Brunswick — if it has to go anywhere.

Mr. Tracey's letter (Town Topics, August 18) was first-class. He sticks to the facts and his points are unanswerable.

Many Community Leaders Contributed To Passage of PHS Parking Ordinance

To the Editor:

Both the Township and Borough recently passed the High School Neighborhood Parking Ordinance. Many worked tirelessly and contributed much to the success of this ordinance and I would like to thank, in alphabetical order, the following for all they have done:

Wendy Benchley, Borough Council, for leading the Ad Hoc Committee on High School Student Parking, for her concern for all constituencies affected by this issue, and for ushering the ordinance through the political process with a sureness of purpose and characteristic grace.

Walter Bliss, School Board and Ad Hoc Committee, for successfully leading the initiative to protect the High School green and for his willingness to support practical solutions that also protect neighborhood streets.

Anne Burns, Ad Hoc Committee and president of the School Board, for her clear voice, fearless leadership, and willingness to work on this issue year after year.

Arch Davis, Ad Hoc Committee, for his considerable engineering expertise and for his creative ideas that substantially shaped the designation of non-residential streets for student parking.

Beth Healey, Ad Hoc Committee, for her flexibility and sense of fun, for her political savvy, and for her 25-plus year commitment to the well-being of the High School neighborhood.

Bill Hearon, Township Committee, for his eloquence, for his ability to build consensus among people with diverse points of view, and for his clear understanding of what it means to live and be in a community.

Casey Hegener, Township Committee and Ad Hoc Committee, for her early optimism and support, for her infectious high level of focused energy, and for her quick grasp of complex issues and ability to think strategically about solutions.

Holly Holcombe, PTO: although Ms. Holcombe is not wholly supportive of this ordinance, I want to acknowledge that her articulation of student and parental concerns significantly shaped and strengthened the support for designated student parking in the Ad Hoc Committee's proposal.

Rachel Howard, Ad Hoc Committee, for her quick intelligence and lively Powerpoint presentation, for her willingness to negotiate, and for her deeply rooted concern for people, community, and the integrity of the political process.

Mayor Phyllis Marchand of Princeton Township, for her devotion and numerous contributions to our community, for her steady leadership in the successful introduction and passing of this ordinance, and for the wisdom she has exercised in assuring its review.

Mayor Joseph O'Neill of Princeton Borough, for his ability to listen well, for his appreciation of the inherent value of neighborhoods, and for his strong leadership at Borough Council.

Phyllis Teitelbaum, Ad Hoc Committee, for her willingness to take on gritty, complex issues that seem irresolvable, for her resiliency and fair mindedness, for her superb writing and organizational skills, and for her lively and generous spirit.

Many thanks to all.

I look forward to continuing our cooperative work together as we move into the implementation and refinement phase of the High School Neighborhood Parking Ordinance.

Plaza Furnishings

for the Plaza Art Committee. "In my opinion that was money well spent."

Some of the leftover money will go toward a $13,000 bus shelter to be constructed in the plaza. Council members suggested using a portion of the remaining money for future repairs and replacement of the plaza furnishings.

Councilman David Goldfarb noted that the tables and chairs, which will be purchased from Smith and Hawken, will come to the Borough unassembled.

Ms. Benchley said that the furnishings are "quick and easy" to assemble, and suggested using some of the leftover furnishing money to pay someone to assemble them.

She added that the committee should be acknowledged for its hard work in planning the layout of the plaza, along with keeping purchases under budget.

"This plaza has changed so dramatically since the first concept," she said, adding that the preliminary plans only included the purchase of benches that would be bolted down in the square.

The tables and chairs that were purchased will not be bolted down or locked up, so that they can be moved to the side or reconfigured for special events in the plaza. If there are incidents of theft, they will be chained down at night, said Ms. Benchley.

Soon after the opening, the library hopes to begin holding outdoor lectures and events in the plaza, Nancy Russell, president of the library's Board of Trustees, said in an earlier interview.

The bike racks, which will cost approximately $9,000 for the 50 U-shaped racks holding two bikes each, were debated by Councilman David Goldfarb, who asked that he and other bikers be consulted about their placement. He said that having that many racks could take away from the plaza's aesthetic appearance.

"If we're spending money on expensive tree grates I don't want a bunch of bikes everywhere," he said.

Some Council members suggested placing the bike racks near or in the garage, along with the area behind the library where they wouldn't be as easily seen.

Council agreed to make a decision on the placement of the bike racks at a future date.

The yet-to-be-named plaza, which is part of the Borough's downtown redevelopment project, will be launched with an opening ceremony on Saturday, October 30.

Residents Can Properly Recycle Electronic Devices

The Princeton Environmental Commission is hosting Recycling Drop-off Day on September 11 in an attempt to offer an environmentally responsible way to decommission unwanted computer and electronic devices.

The rain or shine event, which takes place between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the Community Park Pool parking lot, will give residents the chance to recycle computer monitors, printer's, keyboards, VCRs, terminals, cables, fax machines, radios, modems, CRTs, telephones, TVs, CPUs, copiers, typewriters, and stereo equipment.

Additionally, a bin will be provided by the Princeton Township Police Department to drop off used cell phones. Those phones will subsequently be reprogrammed and issued to victims of domestic violence.

Recycling Drop-off Day is for residents only and not for businesses.

Savory Summer Rice Salad

Get a jump on the new revised USDA Food Pyramid, which will emphasize complex carbohydrates (whole grains) as opposed to the simple carbohydrates found in most processed foods. The advantages of complex carbohydrates include more nutrients, more fiber, fewer available carbs, and, in the case of this Mideast inspired recipe, a real treat for your taste buds.

Serves 4

- 2 cups cooked organic long-grain brown rice, at room temperature
- 1 tbslp extra virgin olive oil
- 3 tbslp lemon juice
- 1/4-1/2 tsp dill weed, to taste
- 1/2 tsp salt (optional)
- 3 organic scallions, thinly sliced
- 1/3 cup toasted cashew pieces
- 4-6 medium dates, rough chopped

1. Toss cooked rice with a dressing made of the olive oil, lemon juice, and dill weed. Season to taste with salt.
2. Add scallions, cashews, and dates and toss well to mix.
3. Serve at room temperature. This salad stores well for 2 to 3 days in the refrigerator.

Borough Council Fills Staff Openings; Approves $1.27 Million in Projects

Borough Council recently voted 4 to 2 to fill six of the eleven staff vacancies it now has. Councilmen Andrew Koontz and Roger Martindell were opposed to the decision.

After anticipating a $21.94 million budget for 2004, Council agreed in early spring to put a freeze on any vacant positions in the Borough until it became apparent that the places needed to be filled. At Monday's meeting, Borough Administrator Bob Bruschi recommended that six of the positions be filled to lessen the workload that has been put on other employees in various Borough departments.

The positions to be filled include vacancies in the Borough's administrative office, the Sewer Operating Committee, the Department of Public Works, the Parking Operations Committee, the Cable TV Committee, and an inspector vacancy on the Fire and Housing Committee.

Council agreed to leave vacant a part-time position in the administrative office, a position in the Department of Public Works that will be vacated once an employee is transferred to the Parking Operations Committee, a dispatcher position in the police force, a vacancy in the Sewer Operating Committee due to a long-term illness, and a clerical position in the police department that will remain temporary.

Both Mr. Martindell and Mr. Koontz said they felt that none of the Borough positions should be filled until Council examines the budget for 2005.

Sewer, Road Improvements

In related news, Borough Council unanimously adopted $1.27 million in bond ordinances on Monday that will finance various projects in town, including road and sewer improvements.

This includes $420,000 in sewer improvements on Alexander Street, University Place, and Edwards Place.

An additional $319,000 will be set aside for intersection improvements at Wiggins and Witherspoon Streets, of which the Borough should be reimbursed almost half by Nassau HKT Urban Renewal Associates, a private partner on the Spring Street development project, said Mr. Bruschi.

Park Place sewer improvements totalling $262,500 will also be reimbursed by Nassau HKT, Palmer Square, and the Princeton Public Library, since all three are responsible for ongoing projects that have increased the need for improvements.

Italian Students Complete Summer Physics Program

A group of twenty Italian high school students from the Abruzzi region in Italy have completed the Gran Sasso-Princeton Physics Summer School hosted by the University's Physics Department. The sessions ran from July 24 to August 20, when the students were awarded a certificate of merit for successful completion of the program.

The Abruzzi is the region where the Italian National research Laboratories are located deep underground in a tunnel beneath the Gran Sasso Mountain. A group of Princeton physicists led by Prof. Frank Calaprice is currently conducting research on solar neutrinos in the Gran Sasso laboratory. The Italian students from that region were selected by way of a competition based on academic merit. They spent their month at Princeton studying modern physics (special relativity, quantum physics and particle physics, taught in Italian), performing lab experiments, attending seminars, and improving their English. They visited New York City, Philadelphia, and Washington, as well as attractions around Princeton. They also met high school students from Princeton and nearby towns.

The program was sponsored by the Physics Department of Princeton University and the Istituto Nazionale di Fisica Nucleare in Italy. Additional local sponsors were the Dorothea House of Princeton, the Princeton-Pettoranello Foundation, the Princeton Italian-America Sportsmen Club, and the Italian Embassy in Washington.

Pawns Over Knights

Chess has many principles, and many exceptions to them. Although almost everybody who learns to play chess is taught the relative values of pieces, there are many positions where the general rules simply don't apply.

In this week's featured game, chsnut puts on an extraordinary show of knight domination and containment ... with pawns! This game was played at a speed of 15/5 indicating that each player begins with 15 minutes and has five seconds added to their time with each move.

The awkward opening that emerges out of this Queen's Gambit Declined sets the tone for the entire game. As a player who has a fascination for the pawn's abilities, I appreciate the importance of them throughout the entire battle. From here on, we will follow the role of the pawn in this week's game.

Out of the opening, white obtains a clear central advantage with intact c, d, and e-pawns. With the dark-squared bishop complementing them down the a3-f8 diagonal, the pawns corral the black knights.

Black spends most of his time in the middlegame attempting to bring the knights into play, but he fails because it is easy for white to use a simple pawn push to reject any maneuvers.

The picture after 23 ... Qxb8 is actually humorous. The knight on e7 can only jump safely to c8, g8, and g6. From c8, it can only go safely back to e7. On g8, it can go to h6 where it is even weaker or back to e7. And on g6, it can go to f8 where it would do no good or go back to e7. The situation is hopeless.

When the minor pieces are finally traded, white

Solution at bottom
White to mate in two.

ensures himself a protected passed pawn first, and then snaps off the knight, which had only recently found a reasonable home on d6.

Consistently, the pawn pushes to c7 and its threat to queen wins the game. This game is a masterpiece in pawn play.

THE 'CADILLAC OF WHEELCHAIRS': Township Mayor Phyllis Marchand received the aid of the Princeton Senior Resource Center after undergoing foot surgery. PSRC has given the mayor temporary use of a wheelchair until she has recovered.

Princeton Senior Resource Center Comes to the Aid of a Mayor-in-Need

When Township Mayor and sometimes short-term, Phyllis Marchand emerged with the things that they from foot surgery on July 27, need," she said. She added she was placed in a situation that while the center does that was completely foreign to her: she was immobile. that they are able to lend out

An avid runner who has completed several marathons, she now could not enjoy so much as a summer evening stroll around the block. or give to those who can't afford it, not everyone who inquires will necessarily be able to acquire a piece of equipment immediately.

"We wish we had more storage space so we could do more of that," she said.

However, Ms. Hoskins did not, describing the residents effects of bunion surgery, should consider services like which is, essentially, a last the those offered by PSRC option for most people. Many and the transit assistance people simply choose to live organization Crosstown 62, with the adverse effects even if those services are only because the pain and recovery involved can be debilitating.

She contacted Community Without Walls, a senior transportation service that can serve those with even temporary injuries, and received some welcome advice.

"Someone said 'why don't you call the Senior Resource Center?' because they have equipment for temporary injuries."

And so they do.

Susan Hoskins, executive director of the Princeton Senior Resource Center, said that while they are unable to help everyone, they try to help as many people in need as they can.

"It so happens that we had a wheelchair available when Mayor Marchand needed it, and we were happy to lend it to her," she said.

One of PSRC's goals, she added, was to help people with short term injuries, like the Mayor's.

"We try to connect people who need services and equipment, sometimes long-term needed on a temporary basis.

"People think that groups like that are for people who lost their license, but it's for people who simply can't drive. It is the kind of thing that someone like Mayor Marchand can use for a short period of time," she said, adding that organizations like PSRC offer services that are not only for the "frail and elderly," but also for those who are "aging and vital, but sometimes hit bumps in the road."

"There are a lot of people out there who say 'I'm not aging, I'm not elderly, and I'm not old, but I am having knee surgery,' and there are services they can receive," she said.

As for Mayor Marchand, being in a wheelchair has allowed her to see the world from a drastically different vantage point.

"Everyone should experience a situation that gives them a sensitivity to people who have some kind of disability," she said. "Everybody should have a week on crutches at some point in their lives so they never will park in a handicap spot."

McGreevey's Resignation

Simon's decision to leave his post as state senator to take a position as lieutenant governor. A special election was subsequently scheduled upon receipt of the resignation, which was effective two months after the submission.

He also pointed to the 2002 withdrawal of then Senator Robert Torricelli who dropped his re-election bid two months prior to the election. The State Supreme Court, in that case, allowed Frank Lautenberg to take his place on the Democratic ticket.

In last Sunday's New York Times op-ed piece, Gov. McGreevey maintained that he will not voluntarily step aside, even amid calls to do so, citing "immediate public policy considerations and actions" that await completion.

He added that in resigning he did not intend to "abandon midstream important initiatives."

The governor also cited responsibilities regarding security during the Republican National Convention, set to begin this coming Monday, as a reason to maintain "the continuity of leadership."

Mr. Mayer, a former Independent member of Township Committee and perennial congressional candidate, disagreed with the governor's assertions.

"The essence of our lawsuit is that as soon as McGreevey had his press conference, that created a vacancy in the office and under the [state] constitution, that vacancy ought to be filled by a special election on September 2."

Assemblywoman Bonnie Watson-Coleman (D-Trenton), the chair of the New Jersey Democratic Committee, was unavailable for comment at press time. Since Gov. McGreevey proffered his intention to resign, State Senator Shirley Turner (D-Ewing) and Assemblyman Bill Baroni (R-Hamilton) have called for the creation of a lieutenant governor position in New Jersey, citing the confusion attending a governor's resignation. If Senate President Codey does succeed Gov. McGreevey as acting governor, he will serve as both senate president and governor until January 2006, when Gov. McGreevey's term would have expired.

Michael Graves Book Shows Off Trademark Everyday Objects

The art of the everyday object is the subject of a new book that highlights the practical household designs of Princeton architect Michael Graves.

The book, Michael Graves Designs: The Art of the Everyday Object (Melcher Media, 2004, 128 pp), is illustrated with more than 200 images of Graves' work throughout the years. In recent years, thanks to the commercial success of his collaboration with Target stores, Graves' work has found a niche in households through-told his mother that he out the country. Included in wanted to be an artist, she the book are his Target col-said, "If you are not as good lections of toasters, jewelry, as Picasso, you will starve," clocks, watches, packaging, and suggested that he become telephones, frames, fans, and an architect or engineer. games.

When he learned what an engineer did, he said he'd become an architect and started making sketches of types, rare examples of per-the houses in the neighbor-sonal sketches, and specially-hood.

Graves graduated with a degree in architecture from the University of Cincinnati in 1958. He then went on to the Harvard Graduate School of Design, which had become a center for modernist thinking in the United States under the leadership of Walter Gropius, the former director of the Bauhaus. After receiving his masters degree, he worked in the office of designer George Nelson, famed for his tables and sofas for Herman Miller and his playful Atomic and Ball clocks. In 1960, Graves won the coveted Prix de Rome, which brought him to the American Academy of Rome for two years.

About the Architect

Upon returning to America, he became a professor of architecture at Princeton University — where he taught from 1962 to 2001, and where currently he is professor emeritus — and set up his own architectural practice. Since 1964, Michael Graves & Associates has undertaken projects worldwide, including multi-use urban developments, corporate headquarters, hotels, libraries, theaters, museums, academic buildings, healthcare facilities, sports and recreational facilities, and housing and private residences. Located in two former houses across the street from one another, the architectural practice takes place in one and the product design division, established in 1991, in the other. In 1994, he opened his own store to display and sell his products. In 2003, the Michael Graves Design Group became an independent company within the larger practice.

Graves' first major public commission was the Portland Office Building in 1982. This was followed by the Humana Building in Louisville, Kentucky (1982), the Team Disney Building in Burbank, California (1986), the Walt Disney World Dolphin and Swan Hotels in Lake Buena Vista, Florida (1987), and the Recent honors include the National Medal of Arts, presented by President Clinton in 1999, and the A.I.A. (American Institute of Architects) Gold Medal in 2001. Graves' award-winning work for Target was showcased in the exhibit US Design 1975-2000 at the Museum of Arts and Design in New York in 2003.

American Indian Photos At Firestone Library

Photographs by Edward Sheriff Curtis (1868-1954), one of the most influential documentarians of American Indian life, customs and folklore, are now on display through Sunday, October 24, in the main exhibition gallery of Princeton University's Firestone Library.

The exhibition, "The North American Indian: Photographs by Edward Curtis, 1895-1927," commemorates the 50th anniversary of Curtis' death. Although his sepia-toned portraits of American Indians are widely familiar, the self-taught Curtis was largely forgotten until a revival in the 1970s popularized his work.

In 1901, Curtis conceived of a monumental project: to use his craft to chronicle the heritage of rapidly disappearing American Indian tribes — their ceremonies, beliefs, customs, daily life and leaders. The project he initially believed would take five years to complete ultimately consumed three decades of Curtis' life, during which he took more than 40,000 photographs and visited more than 80 tribes. His efforts culminated in "The North American Indian (1907-1930)," a 20-volume work organized by tribe and area from the Great Plains to Alaska.

The first volume includes a foreword by President Theodore Roosevelt, who had become interested in Curtis' enterprise. Roosevelt subsequently introduced Curtis to J. Pierpont Morgan, who sponsored Curtis' work and the publication of the compendium, relieving some of the tremendous personal debt Curtis had incurred. The volumes were printed on the finest paper and bound in expensive leather, and each was accompanied by a portfolio of photographs. Sold by subscription and priced initially at $3,000, the set eventually cost approximately $4,200 by 1924 (more than $46,000 in current dollars), putting its purchase out of reach for all but the most avid collectors and libraries. Approximately 227 subscriptions were sold over the life of the project, and the Princeton University Library owns a complete set of this signature work.

On display in the library exhibition will be two dozen photographic plates that feature the variety of dwellings created by various Indian tribes west of the Allegheny Mountains. Of particular interest are the materials used for construction — including animal skins, grass, sticks, mesquite and stone — and the intriguing ways in which they were adapted.

Also included will be pictures of Curtis in the field and commentary about the significance and innovation of his photography. Curtis was among the first photographers to manipulate his images by altering negatives, reducing the depth of field with a large aperture, and adopting the tight cropping and full-face or profile formats characteristic of ethnographic photography. His mastery and concern with creating photographs that are works of art distinguished him from his contemporaries.

On June 6, 1908, an article in The New York Times noted, "Photo-history" is the apt word which has been coined to describe [Curtis' work]. Nothing just like it has ever before been attempted for any people." The writer concluded, "When it is all finished, it will be a monumental work, marvelous for the unstinted care and labor and pains that have gone into its making, remarkable for the beauty of its final embodiment, and highly important because of its historical and ethnographic value."

Curtis' project consumed his time, his marriage, his health and his savings. Filmmaker Anne Makepeace, who produced a 2001 PBS documentary about Curtis, noted that by the end of his career, he was utterly exhausted. "[Curtis] died totally broke in complete obscurity and poverty, despite having actually accomplished the feat he set out to do."

"The North American Indian: Photographs by Edward Curtis, 1895-1927" is free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays (and until 8 p.m. Wednesdays beginning Sept. 15), and noon to 5 p.m. on weekends. For more information, call (609) 258-3184.

Abstraction and Realism Mix in Glen Gardner Show

The mixed media work of area artist Bruce Wall will be featured in an upcoming show at Gallery 31 North in Glen Gardner through October.

The show, "Lost Entries," will open with a reception for the arts on September 12 from 1 to 4 p.m.

As described by the artist, the exhibit features "heavily painted and collaged imagery [that] juxtaposes abstraction and realism, color and black and white, and the symbolic and the literal."

Inspired by a 1923 Webster's Illustrated Dictionary rescued from the trash by Mr. Wall in 1992, the works in the show use letters — and imagery relating to the letters — to create simple compositions with "highly complex content." Vowels, according to the artist, are the "life letters and the soul of words are...the metaphorical significance of language."

Mr. Wall has exhibited throughout New York City. He is currently an associate professor of art at Northampton Community College in Bethlehem, Pa. The exhibition has been organized by the independent curator, Kristen Accola, formerly the exhibitions director at the Hunterdon Museum of Art in Clinton.

"Lost Entries" will run through Halloween. Gallery 31 North is located on the ground floor of the Historic Hunt House on the corner of Route 31 and Hunt Place in Glen Gardner. Gallery hours are Thursday through Sunday, 1 to 4 p.m., or by appointment. For more information, call (908) 537-7044.

West Windsor to Host Visual Arts Afternoon

A free event at West Windsor's Nassau Park Pavilion will feature a host of activities and a creative display of visual arts for all ages on September 18.

The event, which is rain or shine, will include sculpting for young children, crafting handmade books, decorative mask-making, Christo-inspired art brick sculpture, building sculpture from recycled cans, gold-leafing, and a "drop-in" drawing and watercolor session.

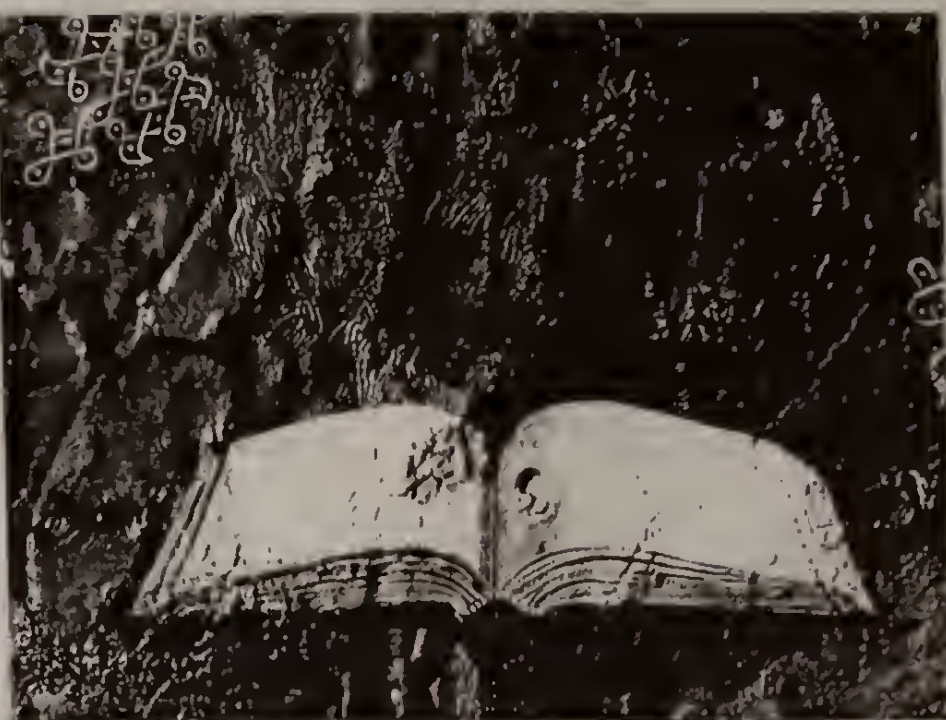

From 2:15 and 3:30 p.m., authors/artists Ina Brosseau Marx and Allen Marx will demonstrate gold-leafing, and then lead participants through an interactive project.

Other interactive art activities include: creating decorative paper books from papers and trim bindings; creating masks from construction paper using collage and other techniques; and "Crayola magic sculpting" using air-drying and non-toxic sculpting material; "Pick up" drawing and watercolor session, also using pastels, charcoal, colored pencils, and crayons; and building artistic structures from recycled soda cans.

Folk Music Group to Host Songwriter Garnet Rogers

The Princeton Folk Music Society will open its 2004-05 Concert Series with a performance by singer-songwriter Garnet Rogers at 8:15 p.m. on Friday, September 10 at Christ Congregation Church.

Called "the greatest male interpreter and vocalist performing in the contemporary folk scene" by Sing Out! Magazine, Mr. Rogers has issued a dozen albums, some solo and others with artists such as Archie Fisher, Greg Brown, and Karen Savoca.

Mr. Rogers uses his tours to advance a number of worthy causes, including the campaign to end hunger. In response to his request, the Folk Music Society is inviting attendees to bring to this concert donations of nonperishable food and/or personal care items such as shampoo or toothpaste. The donations will be forwarded to the Crisis Ministry of Princeton and Trenton.

In an interview with The Toronto Globe and Mail, Mr. Rogers said, "Everywhere we go, we're being disconnected from the things that make us human. I see live music as part of the solution. What I'm trying to do is restore that sense of community in my shows."

Admission to the concert is $15 for the public, $10 for members of the Folk Music Society and affiliated organizations, and $3 for children, with special rates for students. There are no advance sales.

Free parking is available at the church.

MUSIC REVIEW

New Jersey Opera Theater's "Albert Herring" Brings Opera Back to Princeton This Summer

Despite the demise of Opera Festival of New Jersey, summer opera is not completely dead in Princeton. New Jersey Opera theater, founded in 2002 to offer opera performances to New Jersey audiences, took up residence at Princeton University this past month to present a Summer Vocal Institute. Featuring more than forty young singers from throughout the United States, the company presented three operas within a week's time: Mozart's Don Giovanni, Britten's Albert Herring, and a double bill of Ravel's L'enfant et les Sortilèges and Offenbach's comedic Ba-Ta-Clan. Each opera was performed twice in the intimate space of Princeton's Hamilton Murray Theater. Although the ambience of Hamilton Murray Theater is a long way from the elegance of McCarter, there were many good things about this venture to return opera to Princeton in the summer.

The second of these productions, Albert Herring, was composed by Britten in 1947 as the first work for the newly established English Opera Group. This three-act comic opera is a parody of rural English life at the end of the 19th century, and in the score one can also hear musical parodies of Edwardian England as well as the patter of Gilbert & Sullivan.

For this production, New Jersey Opera Theater brought together thirteen young singers, some of whom are clearly beyond the apprentice-type vocal institute. In the small black-box theater environment of Hamilton Murray, these singers needed no amplification to get their voices across, especially since accompaniment was with piano. The first singer seen onstage, Margaret O'Connell as Florence Pike, was initially most impressive for her lightning typing ability in perfect time with the music. The role of Florence Pike was low in the mezzo register at times, but Ms. O'Connell soared into the upper ranges and carried the comic element well. Florence Pike works for Lady Billows, sung by Madeline Abel-Kerns, a singer who is clearly beyond the vocal institute stage and surely has a regional career out there somewhere. Ms. Abel-Kerns' character was formidable, and her rich mezzo commanded the stage and filled the hall.

The four male leads were a bit more diverse in experience and vocal color. As Mayor Upfold, Benjamin-Edouard Savoie was the most comedic, with a solid voice.

Nathan Resika showed a good lower register as Superintendent Budd, and the characters of Vicar Gedge and Sid were solidly sung by Justin Johnson and Daniel Seigel. Donna Maria Pimental rounded out the quintet of conspirators as Miss Wordsworth. These were diverse voices, and although the ensemble numbers filled the hall well, the individual voices were not always well matched when put together. One combination which always worked was Mr. Seigel and Tracy Kaufman, playing the role of Sid's girlfriend Nancy. These two singers always had good control over the dynamics and drama of the scene, as well as the music.

Jacob Feldman was no doubt selected as Albert Herring for his light, young-sounding voice and innocent demeanor. Although his innocence clearly came across, he was not one of the stronger singers in the cast, especially overshadowed at times by Mr. Seigel and Ms. Kaufman in their scenes together. There is a lot of humor in the score, which Mr. Feldman, as well as the other singers, brought out well.

Three student singers also contributed significantly to the cast. Colleen McDonald is a student at West Morris Mendham High School, Noelle Arteché a student at Union High School, and Christopher Heinze a student at the Horace Mann School and a member of the Philadelphia Boys Choir. Ms. McDonald especially demonstrated a great deal of stage and vocal presence, but all of these students carried their roles well and the opportunity to perform in this type of Institute is invaluable for them.

Although this opera was long (more than three hours), there were many good things about New Jersey Opera Theater's first venture into a Summer Vocal Institute in Princeton. Conductor Daniel Beckwith, together with the exceptional pianist Michael Dauphinais, kept the music (some of which perhaps could have been cut to keep the opera shorter) flowing, and Thom Bumblauskas' simple Victorian set designs were effective, although having singers change the scenes on the uncurtained stage gave a slight feel of a summer camp production. The general pace of the evening was a bit slow (with intermissions which were way too long), but New Jersey Opera Theater's first foray into Princeton was full of promise.

Chorale Plans Auditions For All Voice Parts

Pennington's Voices Chorale is inviting singers in all voice parts to a pre-season interview and audition. Tenors, low basses and first sopranos are especially needed, but all singers are welcome.

Voices, as the name implies, works with the singing voice, and has encouraged many who gave up singing years ago to begin singing again. Familiarity with reading music and with singing in Latin or German helps, but is not required.

Conducted by Dr. Lynne Ransom, the Chorale performs a varied repertoire. This season singers will perform excerpts from the Bach Magnificat, a Brahms motet, Handel's Saul, and a variety of music written from 1900 to 2002 on poetry by Walt Whitman. Outreach concerts at Trenton Psychiatric Hospital and several area retirement centers offer a more diverse repertoire, from spirituals and show music to the sacred and classic.

Voices also offers the opportunity to learn music history, performance style, and vocal technique through master classes with area voice teachers.

Rehearsals are held on Monday evenings from 7:30 to 9:45 p.m. at the Timberlane Middle School in Pennington.

Auditions will be held September 8 and September 13 in the early evening. For an appointment, call Sandy Duffy, auditions coordinator, at (609) 799-2211.

Trenton Children's Chorus Now Scheduling Auditions

The Trenton Children's Chorus has announced that it will hold auditions for its 2004-05 season. Registration opens August 31.

While prior musical training is not necessary to participate in the Chorus, an audition is required for children in the fifth grade and older. Children will be accepted based on their skills, maturity, and readiness. A prepared audition piece is not necessary.

Those accepted will receive voice training and develop performance and sight-singing skills.

The Trenton Children's Chorus has served children in the second grade through high school since 1989. Children in the 5th through 8th grades participate in the Intermediate Choir on Tuesdays at First Presbyterian Church, Trenton. In addition to rehearsal they receive music theory instruction, supervised homework, and a snack. Selected members of the Intermediate Choir may also be invited to join The Covenant Singers, a multi-cultural choir of children from Trenton and Princeton that meets in Princeton on Sunday evenings. High school youth and 8th grade boys with lowered voices rehearse Tuesday evenings in Trenton.

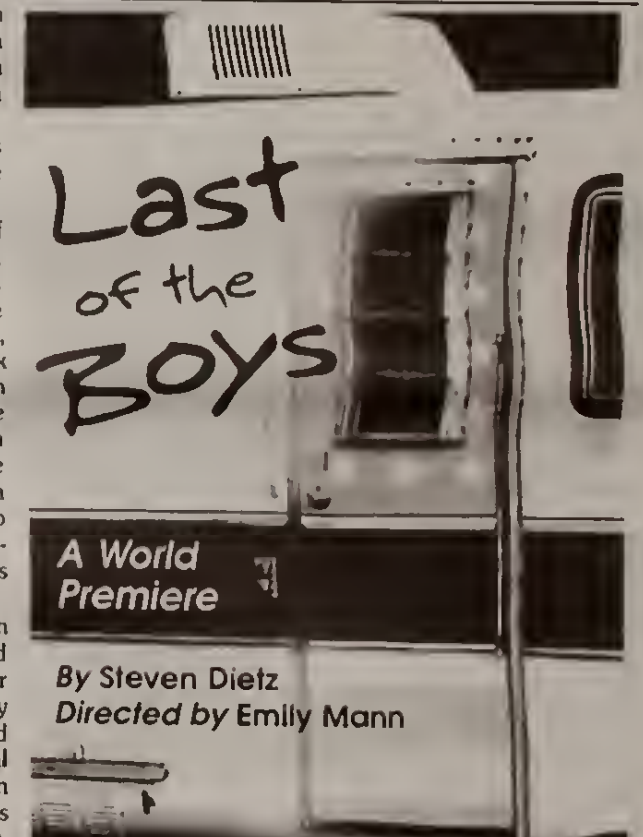

Under the leadership of founding director Sue Ellen Page, the Trenton Children's Chorus has performed at the New Jersey State Legislature, in concert with Dave Brubeck and Bobby McFerrin, with Princeton Pro Musica, at the National Cathedral in Washington, D.C., and as the children's chorus in the opera Carmen. The Chorus also provides educational scholarships to qualified members and graduates.

The Intermediate and High School Divisions are directed by Dr. Victor Shen, a former member of the music faculty at Tung Hai University and music director of the National Taiwan University Chorus in Taipei. Dr. Shen holds advanced degrees from Westminster Choir College and the University of Maryland.

Membership in the Trenton Children's Chorus is open to all children in the Greater Trenton Area in second grade through high school. Those in fifth grade through high school wishing to audition should contact Gloria Bethea at (609) 393-9645.

Repertory Ballet Company Schedules Its New Season

American Repertory Ballet's 26th season will feature performances of family favorites, revivals, and company premieres. The schedule was announced by ARB Artistic Director Graham Lustig.

The ballet company will kick off its 2004-05 season with The Nutcracker at McCarter Theatre on November 20. Choreographed by Mr. Lustig, the production will feature more than 100 dancers from the company and from American Repertory Ballet's Princeton Ballet School. Performances are scheduled at McCarter Theatre from November 20 to November 28, at Trenton's War Memorial on December 5, and at New Brunswick's State Theatre on December 18 and 19.

In addition to its traditional venue performances, ARB's new season will feature a series of in-studio performances at its Princeton and New Brunswick studios. These performances will preview sections from longer works, and offer audiences a close-up view of the company at work. The Princeton in-studio dates are February 13, February 26, and April 9, all at 6 p.m.; the New Brunswick date is March 19 at 6 p.m.

On March 13, the company will bring Mr. Lustig's A Mid- summer Night's Dream to the Patriots Theatre at the War Memorial in Trenton. On April 2, ARB will perform a new work at the Berrie Center for the Performing Arts at Ramapo College in Mahwah.

A native of London, Mr. Lustig received his dance training at the Royal Ballet School. After graduation he joined the Dutch National Ballet, becoming one of its soloist dancers. His first choreography, Thanatos Instinct, won him a Dutch Ministry of Culture award. His ballet Inscape earned him a Lawrence Olivier award nomination. In 1991 he stopped performing in order to focus on choreography and dance education. Last year, he was named a charter member of the Artists Council for Americans for the Arts in Washington, D.C.

The Princeton Ballet School, one of the largest non-profit dance institutions affiliated with a professional company in the U.S., is the official school of ARB. Founded in 1954, it has facilities in Princeton, Cranbury, and New Brunswick, serving more than 1,200 students.

Library, McCarter Theatre Hold New Series Together

"McCarter Live at the Library," a new series co-sponsored by Princeton Public Library and McCarter Theatre Center, will kick off Monday, August 30, at 7:30 p.m., when playwright Steven Dietz and McCarter Artistic Director Emily Mann present a program on Mr. Dietz's new play, Last of the Boys.

Ms. Mann will direct the world premiere of Last of the Boys at McCarter's Berline Theatre from September 7 through October 17. The play tells the story of the reunion of two soldiers whose lives were changed forever by the events of a day in 1967, when both served as soldiers in Vietnam.

Mr. Dietz is the author of more than 20 plays and adaptations that have been staged off-Broadway and in more than 100 regional theatres. His works have been produced in England, France, Germany, Japan, Sweden, Australia, Argentina, Peru, Singapore, Slovenia, and South Africa. He is the recipient of the PEN U.S.A. Award in Drama, the Kennedy Center Fund for New American Plays Award, and the Lila Wallace/Reader's Digest Award. He lives in Seattle.

Artistic director of McCarter for more than a decade, Ms. Mann has directed about two dozen productions, including her highly lauded adaptation of Sarah L. Delany and Elizabeth Delany's "Having Our Say," for which she was awarded the Hull-Warriner Award. She received a Peabody Award for her screenplay of the work, which aired on CBS television. She is also a recipient of two Obie Awards and has been nominated for the Outer Critics Circle and Drama Desk Awards. McCarter was recipient of the 1994 Tony Award for Outstanding Regional Theatre.

At the library, the playwright and director will discuss and read from part of Last of the Boys before taking questions from the audience.

THE DANCE OF DEFENSE: While little is known about the roots of capoeira, it is believed to have been practiced by Africans enslaved by the Portuguese in Brazil. Some theorize that slaves used capoeira's dance-like appearance as a way to hide their training in combat and self defense.

Brazilian Dance Group To Perform at Library

Princeton University's Capoeira, a Brazilian dance group, will perform at the Princeton Public Library on Friday, August 27, as part of the library's Unquiet Fridays.

Capoeira is a Brazilian art form that combines martial arts, dance, rhythm and movement. It is "a dialog between players, a conversation through movement which can take on many shades of meaning," according to the group's website.

During a capoeira session, or "jogo," two players exchange movements of attack and defense in a constant flow while observing the rituals and proper manners of the art. Both players attempt to control the space by confusing the opponent with deceptive moves.

The pace of each game is determined by the rhythms of a one-stringed musical instrument called a berimbau, accompanied by various indigenous percussion instruments. Solo and group singing in a call-and-response form complete the musical accompaniment.

While little is known about the roots of capoeira, it is believed to have been practiced by Africans enslaved by the Portuguese in Brazil. Some theorize that slaves used capoeira's dance-like appearance as a way to hide their training in combat and self defense.

Today, both the Angola and regional forms of the dance have generated new schools and styles based upon interpretations of the teachings of late instructors Mestre Pastinha and Mestre Bimba. Some of these schools have attempted to maintain the characteristics of the original styles, while others have developed their own versions of the dance.

Members of the Princeton University group, formed in the spring of 2002, take classes that focus on the movements, history and traditions. The group trains under the instruction of Contra Mestre Zumbi. A native of Rio de Janeiro, he has taught capoeira and Afro-Brazilian dance for more than ten years in Brazil and the U.S.

The accomplished musician, dancer, and capoeirista conducts workshops and performs internationally. Currently he teaches in Princeton, Newark, and Manhattan, and performs throughout the area.

Classes are open to people of any age who are interested in the dance, and instructors welcome first-time visitors. For more information on Capoeira, visit www.princeton.edu/~capoeira.

Capoeira will perform at the library, located at 65 Witherspoon Street, on Friday, August 27, at 7:30 p.m.

Theatre Intime Season Offers Old With the New

Princeton University's Theatre Intime has announced that its 2004-05 season will feature works ranging from Shakespeare classics to a Neil Simon comedy and new plays such as Karl Gajdusek's Fair Game, which will run two weekends, September 16 through 18 and September 23 through 25.

Directed by Ronee Penoi '07, Fair Game deals with the lives of five individuals tied to a presidential campaign during the two weeks before the "Super Tuesday" primaries.

The season will move from presidential politics to social politics with Neil Simon's Rumors, directed by Ben Fast '06, which will run October 7 to 9 and October 14 to 16.

The theme of deception will be explored in Tom Stoppard's The Real Thing. Directed by Greg Taubman '06, it will run November 4 to 6 and November 11 to 13. Deceit and deceit are the only constants, and the "real thing" is never what it seems in Mr. Stoppard's comedy.

From December 2 to December 4, original student work will be showcased at the Student Playwrights' Festival. Freshmen will get their chance to write and perform with the Fifth Annual Freshman One-Act Festival, February 3 through 5. The festival features one-act plays directed, designed, and acted by freshmen.

A Chorus Line, a collaboration between Theatre Intime and Princeton University Players, will be performed February 17 to 19 and February 24 to 26. Originally conceived and choreographed by Michael Bennett, and written by James Kirkwood and Nicholas Dante with music and lyrics by Martin Hamlisch and Edward Kleban, the show will be directed by Branden Jacobs-Jenkins '06 and Ashley Soloff '07.

William Shakespeare's Cymbeline, a co-production with Princeton Shakespeare Company, will run March 24 to 26 and March 31 to April 2, directed by Jed Peterson '06.

Ben Mains '06 will direct two one-act plays by Eugene Ionesco, The Bald Soprano and The Chairs, April 7 through 9 and April 14 through 16. The season will end with Kate Fodor's Hannah and Martin, about Jewish philosopher Hannah Arendt and her lover and mentor, Martin Heidegger.

Library Offers Advice On Parking Validations

While many patrons of the Princeton Public Library are aware that they are eligible for a parking validation at the Spring Street Garage while visiting the library, many are confused as to how to obtain it.

The library staff will provide patrons with one or two hours of parking validation, depending upon the time the person enters the garage. Drivers must obtain a ticket when driving into the garage in order to receive the validation. Currently, the library's equipment is not able to provide a validation for drivers using a Smart Card.

To receive the validation credit, go to the customer service desk right before leaving the library. Then, go directly to a pay-on-foot station in the garage and insert the ticket to receive validation. Patrons will then have 15 minutes to return to their cars and exit the garage.

If a patron spends less than 20 minutes in the library, he or she will not receive a validation, as the first 30 minutes in the garage are free. The library gives each patron 10 minutes to make the trip from the facility to the garage, which is directly outside the back door.

If a patron has been in the garage between 21 and 60 minutes, he or she receives an hour parking validation. If a patron has been in the library between 61 and 120 minutes, he or she receives two hours of validation.

If a library staff member incorrectly calculates the parking validation, patrons must pay at the garage when leaving, and ask for a receipt. Upon returning to the library for another visit, take the receipt to a library staff member who will reimburse you for the amount.

Parking validation is provided to library card-holders only. Patrons must spend time in the library prior to obtaining the validation. The library pays the Borough on a monthly basis for all parking it reimburses to its patrons.

To report a concern or ask a question regarding parking at the library, contact Director Leslie Burger at (609) 924-8822, ext. 253, or email lburger@princetonlibrary.org.

BOOK REVIEW

Missions and Assignments: Back to School With Holden Caulfield

For American kids who are looking forward to or dreading the first day of school, the best-known and most widely read fictional teenager is probably the bespectacled Brit with magic powers and not the depressed, wise-cracking New York teenager who just got kicked out of school. Kids of all ages have taken to Harry Potter, but J.D. Salinger's failed student has been the alter ego for generations of readers and today Holden Caulfield stands beside Jay Gatsby and Huckleberry Finn as one of those characters who has become so much a part of our consciousness it seems almost unnecessary to mention the titles of the novels that gave them to us.

The Catcher in the Rye is conspicuously absent from the suggested summer reading lists for grades nine through 12 at Princeton High School, no doubt because the listmakers know that it's either already been read or is sure to be an assignment in one class or another when the semester begins. Of course not everyone is introduced to Holden Caulfield in the classroom. The Catcher is a book parents suggest to kids who hate to read or can't be bothered to take on "serious" books.

"Assignment" is not a word to inspire gladness in a student's heart. It suggests duty, deadlines, study questions, and tests, among numerous other things that Holden couldn't deal with at Pencey Prep. What helps Catcher survive the onus of "assignment" is that its narrator and protagonist is close to the age of high school readers and speaks to them in an appealingly dissident voice right from the first sentence, with its casual dig at serious literature ("and all that David Copperfield crap"). It doesn't hurt that Holden is funny and sees the world in a uniquely funny way. Anyone who can read the first chapters for the first time with a straight face will probably sit through the Marx Brothers or Saturday Night Live without cracking a smile.

Holden's story, however, is more than funny. "A Good Book Should Make You Cry," Laura Miller's piece in last Sunday's issue of the New York Times Book Review, discusses how schools are feeding teens and even pre-teens a diet of problem novels featuring protagonists from the same age group facing life-or-death challenges. Catcher can also be read as a problem novel. For all the fun to be found in Holden's voice, his take on phonies, his swearing, his hilarious accounts of corny Hollywood movies, this kid is seriously depressed. Today the authorities at Pencey would have put him on Paxil or Prozac or Ritalin.

I'm glad I discovered The Catcher in the Rye on my own. My senior English teacher would have spoiled Salinger for me. The one truly positive teacher-mandated reading experience I had before college was in a two-room country school house listening to my fifth-grade teacher read us Little House on the Prairie.

I first met Holden Caulfield while looking through paperbacks displayed in a revolving rack in a magazine shop. This was before the book had become a cultural phenomenon. The cover caught my eye. It showed a boy with his hat on backwards toting a suitcase as he prepared to enter what looked like a seedy adult scene where a worldly woman was lighting a cigarette while a sinister overcoated figure hovered nearby. Probably what made me take the book down and start reading was the title and the sales pitch on the cover: "This unusual book may shock you, will make you laugh, and may break your heart — but you will never forget it."

I read the first chapter right there in the store. After that, not wanting to embarrass myself by laughing out loud, I bought it. It was rare for me to buy a book in those days. I was about Holden's age, ready to start my senior year of high school. After reading the second chapter, I ran out of the house to share it with some friends. I wanted to read the funny bits out loud to someone. This was a completely unique voice suggesting possibilities of expression that had simply not been thinkable before. Like so many others who discovered it, it made me want to be a writer.

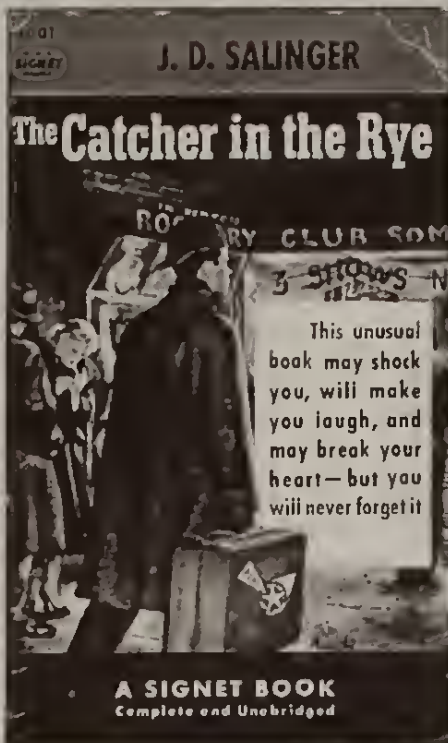

The scene I read aloud to my friends was the one where Holden visits his ailing, aged history teacher. I think it's still probably the funniest scene in the book and the one most likely to exhilarate young readers who can immediately identify with this classic student-teacher situation. Even serious, assignment-friendly "A" students have probably experienced at least a variation on what Holden has to put up with when "old Spencer" insists on reading aloud his answer to the "optional essay" question that caused Holden to flunk the course; his answer begins "The Egyptians were an ancient race of Caucasians residing in one of the northern sections of Africa. The latter as we all know is the largest continent in the Eastern Hemisphere."

An earlier version of the same scene can be found in I'm Crazy, a story Salinger published in Collier's six years before the book itself appeared. It reads like a clumsy impersonation of the published Catcher and it isn't nearly as funny. One reason is that Holden's language had to be toned down, "hell" became "heck" and instead of the classic line that has "old Spencer" handling Holden's exam paper "like it was a turd or something," he handles it "as though it were something catching he had to handle for the good of science or something." It's safe to say I'd have been less likely to buy the book if I'd read that version of the first chapter.

The original paperback cover reproduced here is the one that caught my eye. I've read the book four or five times since in various hardcover editions, but it's never captivated me the way it did when I read it in high school. It was the humor and the newness of the voice that impressed me then. Reading it as an adult, I'm more aware that what makes the character so special is that he's a teenager who sees the world with the eyes of a man who saw combat on D-Day and, according to various biographers, suffered a nervous breakdown. Holden's problems are way beyond flunking history. His younger brother has died, his older brother has "sold out" to Hollywood, his favorite girl has taken up with "the king of the phonies," and his favorite teacher, his last refuge during his Manhattan odyssey, makes a pass at him. Or so Holden thinks. "His tragedy," as William Faulkner said, is that "when he attempted to enter the human race, there was no human race there."

U.S. Men's 8 Crew Mines Gold In Summer Games, Producing Major Highlight for Locals at Athens

Things are pretty quiet around Lake Carnegie these days as the dog days of summer stretch toward Labor Day. The waters aren't full of rowers busting their guts as they try to squeeze out every ounce of speed in their boats while the parking lot at the Princeton University boathouse is nearly empty.

WRECKING CREW: Former Princeton University rowing star Chris Ahrens saw his smiles turn to shouts of joy last Sunday as he helped stroke the U.S. men's eight to a gold medal at the Athens Summer Olympics. Ahrens, a 1998 Princeton alum who was competing in his second Olympics, was joined on the boat by 1996 Hun School graduate Jason Read as the U.S. won its first gold in the event since the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. The U.S. posted a wire-to-wire victory which saw the boat cover the 2,000-meter course at the Schinias Rowing Center in 5:42.48 in cruising past silver medalist Germany and bronze medalist Netherlands. (Photo courtesy of USRowing)

But the U.S. national team rowers that use the Lake Carnegie boathouse as their training base made noise heard round the world last Sunday at the Athens Summer Games when the U.S. men's eight-man boat flew to a gold medal and the U.S. women's eight took silver.

The men's eight had a distinctive local flavor with Princeton University 1998 alum Chris Ahrens and 1996 Hun School grad Jason Read helping stroke the boat to history as the U.S. took its first gold in the event since the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. The U.S. men's head coach, Mike Teti, guided the Tigers men's freshman heavyweight crew from 1989-1996.

The women's crew, which was edged by Romania, also had a Princeton connection as Lianne Nelson of the Class of 1995 was on the second-place boat.

For the men, taking gold was sweet redemption after finishing a disappointing fifth in the 2000 Summer Olympics. "We were crushed," said Ahrens in an interview with NBC as he recalled that race four years ago.

There were no such feelings Sunday in the aftermath of the men's wire-to-wire victory which saw the boat cover the 2,000-meter course at the Schinias Rowing Center in 5:42.48 in cruising past silver medalist Germany and bronze medalist Netherlands.

"It's the first gold medal for the U.S. after 40 years," said Read as he was quoted on the row2k website. "It was a very difficult race with good opponents. We tried for the best and we did it."

For Read, a Ringoes resident who was the chief of a New Jersey rescue squad that was called into duty to help in the aftermath of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks on New York City, the triumph Sunday had a special meaning.

As the rowers were given their medals at the post-race ceremony, Read trembled with emotion, biting his lip and fighting back tears as the National Anthem was played.

"I think that my colleagues (the fire fighters who worked with him at ground zero) will be happy for the country and my boat-mates," added Read, who spent days at ground zero after the September 11 attack searching through the rubble for survivors. "There is no greater privilege than to represent America during this time. It's a privilege to be up here and to be part of the Olympic spirit."

For the fiery Teti, who is legendary for filling the air over Lake Carnegie with colorful, sometimes profane, admonitions to his rowers, the win was a matter of necessity.

"We knew we had to end a 40-year drought in this race," declared Teti afterward according to row2k.

"Today the conditions were more suited to the crew. They had a good start. The plan was to have a clean good start and to hold everyone in the first 200 meters. We planned to attack after 600 meters."

The Olympic rowing competition also saw Princeton 2001 grad Thomas Herschmiller earn a silver medal with the Canadian coxless four.

While other rowers with Princeton connections aren't leaving Athens with medals, they acquitted themselves well. Danika Holbrook, a 1995 Princeton University grad, helped the women's quadruple sculls finish sixth. Her husband, Ben Holbrook, a Brown graduate who rows with Princeton Training Center, competed with the men's quadruple scull that took 11th.

Coach Teti's younger brother, Paul Teti, a 1996 Hun School grad and a 2000 Princeton alum, was on board as the men's lightweight four finished fifth in the B final, ending up 11th overall in its competition. Aquil Abdullah and Henry Nuzum, who both live in Princeton and row out of the Princeton Training Center, took sixth in the men's double sculls.

For athletes with Princeton ties who competed outside the rowing arena, Princeton senior fencer Soren Thompson outdid himself as he took seventh in the men's epee last week. Thompson's placement was the best in nearly 50 years by a U.S. fencer in this event and the sixth-highest epee finish ever for an American. Princeton sophomore Kamara James lost her first-round match in women's epee.

QUICKSILVER: Lianne Nelson, a 1995 Princeton University alum, was elated last Sunday as she helped the U.S. women's eight crew take a silver medal at the Athens Summer Olympics. The U.S. boat posted a time of 6:19.56 over the 2,000-meter course as it was edged by Romania, which clocked a time of 6:17.70.

On the track, 2002 Princeton alum Tora Harris cleared 2.15 meters in the high jump but didn't qualify for the finals.

In the pool, recent Princeton graduate Juan Valdivieso, competing for Peru, swam 2:02.79 in the 200-meter butterfly which placed him 28th in the qualifying rounds and prevented him from advancing to the semifinals. Valdivieso also competed in the 100 fly, where he finished 47th in the qualifying round with a time of 55.98.

This Thursday, 1995 Princeton High graduate Andy Potts will look to produce another memorable Olympic moment as he competes in the men's triathlon. Potts, a former All-American swimmer at Michigan who just took up the triathlon in 2002, is hoping to continue his meteoric rise in his sport with a medal.

ROOKIE SENSATION: Princeton lacrosse great Ryan Boyle, right, fights past a defender as he looks to trigger the attack for the Philadelphia Barrage of the MLL. Boyle, who led the Tiger men's lacrosse team to the NCAA Final Four this spring, capped a remarkable year as he played a key role in helping the Barrage take the MLL title last weekend. Boyle scored 51 points on 20 goals and 31 assists for the Barrage over the regular season and the playoffs and was named the MLL Rookie of the Year for his efforts.

Former Princeton Star Striebel Enjoys Ride As Barrage Goes from Cellar to MLL Crown

After enduring a 1-11 season last year with the Bridgeport Barrage of the Major Lacrosse League (MLL), former Princeton star Matt Striebel was hoping things would turn around when the franchise moved to Philadelphia this spring.

Midway through the 2004 season, however, it looked like business as usual as the Barrage stumbled to a 2-5 start and seemed headed to the league cellar once again.

Nevertheless, Striebel, who had been with the franchise since its inception in 2001, sensed that the team was on the verge of a turnaround.

"Even when we were down, there was a sense that we had good players and that we were just missing a few pieces," said Striebel, a 2001 graduate of Princeton who was a key performer for both the Tigers' lacrosse and soccer teams. "The addition of Greg Catrano in goal and then [former Princeton star] Ryan Boyle made a big difference."

Bolstered by Catrano and Boyle, the Barrage caught fire, winning their last five games of the regular season to qualify for the MLL semifinals last weekend in Boston.

The sizzling club culminated its improbable run by edging the Rochester Rattlers 18-17 in the league semifinals and then toppling the host Boston Cannons 13-11 in the championship game before a crowd of 8,269 at Nickerson Field on the campus of Boston University.

For Striebel, the triumph was a particularly sweet moment in his athletic career. "Anytime you win a championship game, it's a great, great thing," said midfielder Striebel, who scored Philadelphia's final goal in the title game and was joined in the scoring column Sunday by Boyle and fellow Princeton alum B.J. Prager.

"It's particularly exciting, given that we were 1-11 last season and 2-5 at one point this season. When you go from worst to first, there is some vindication. That's pretty great."

Scoring the crucial goal late in Sunday's game that gave the Barrage a 13-10 edge was a great feeling for Striebel. "I had other opportunities earlier in the game when I got a glimpse of the goal but I didn't take the shot," said Striebel, who ended up with 17 goals and 13 assists this season.

"In that situation late in the game, I got a step on the defender and it seemed like the right time to take the shot. It was important because it gave us a cushion."

The addition of Boyle, who was obtained in a draft-day trade with Rochester in June, was a vitally important factor in the Barrage's title drive.

"Anytime you add someone like Ryan Boyle, it's a turning point," said Striebel of the Tiger great who led Princeton to the NCAA Final Four this spring and went on to be named the MLL Rookie of the Year after finishing second in the league with 28 assists in the regular season despite missing one-third of the season.

"He's such a great player, he's a coach on the field. His talent is to make the right decisions on the field, the MLL is a fast league and we needed a player behind the goal like Ryan."

In Striebel's view, Boyle's pass-first approach became contagious. "I think one of the things that happened was that we realized the benefits of being unselfish," explained Striebel, who has worked for Warrior Lacrosse the last two years when he hasn't been in action for the Barrage. "The bottom line is that this is a team game. Ryan really helped with that and a lot of guys bought into that."

During his Princeton career, Striebel got used to that kind of winning approach on both the lacrosse and soccer fields. "It was a great experience to play for Bill Tierney (in lacrosse) and Jim Barlow (in soccer)," added the 6'1, 190-pound Striebel, who played on two NCAA title teams in lacrosse and an Ivy League title winner in soccer.

"They have different personalities but the thing that came through about both is that they care so much for the players and the team. There is such a passion and commitment."

Utilizing that type of passion and commitment helped Striebel and his Barrage teammates put together their memorable title run.

—Bill Alden

WINNING SMILES: Former Princeton University lacrosse stars, Matt Striebel, left, and B.J. Prager are all smiles after they helped lead the Philadelphia Barrage to a win over the New Jersey Pride in Major League Lacrosse (MLL) action earlier this summer. Last Sunday, Striebel and Prager each scored goals to help the Barrage beat Boston 13-11 to win the MLL title. Striebel had 30 points (17 goals, 13 assists) in the regular season and playoffs while Prager added 21 (20 goals, one assist) as Philadelphia won their last seven games after starting 2-5. In 2003, the Barrage had posted a league-worst 1-11 mark. (Photo by Bill Allen/NJ SportAction)

Szymanski Making It in Montana As He Starts Pro Baseball Career

For some Princeton University baseball players, being sent out to Billings, Montana to play minor league ball would be a major change of pace.

But going from the relative flatlands of the Garden State to mountainous Big Sky country has been a natural fit for B.J. Szymanski, a former Tiger star and native of Wichita Falls, Texas.

"Things are going pretty well out here," said Szymanski in his Texas twang as he reflected on his summer with the Billings Mustangs, a Cincinnati Reds affiliate that plays in the Pioneer League at the "Rookie Advanced" classification of the minor leagues. "The city is a lot like my hometown, it's not too big, it's not too small."

Szymanski, however, acknowledged that he has needed to put a bigger focus on baseball as he looks to move up the Reds' organization.

"You have to come out and produce everyday," said Szymanski, who hit .362 with six homers and 48 RBIs this spring for Princeton in his junior season and was then chosen in the second round of the Major League Baseball draft by the Reds as the 48th pick overall.

"In college you have other things going on and that's great. Here you have to be very focused on baseball and you have to use your time on the field to get better. The daily grind is tough. I'm trying to acclimate myself and get as many at bats as possible."

Szymanski started producing right away with the Mustangs, hitting a homer in his second game. He smacked three homers in his first nine games, hitting at a .333 clip.

His batting average leveled off to the .295 area before the 6'5, 215-pound centerfielder hurt his quad muscle. Struggling to shake off that injury, Szymanski is hitting .259 with three homers and 17 RBIs through his first 22 games.

Despite the drop in his batting average, Szymanski feels he is adjusting to pro pitching. "Some of the pitching here is a lot like what I saw at the upper echelon of the teams we played at Princeton, some is better," said Szymanski, a first-team All-Ivy selection this spring. "Everybody's fastball is a little faster and their curves break a little more. You get used to it."

The levelheaded Szymanski said his experience playing under head coach Scott Bradley at Princeton has come in handy as he has dealt with the ups and downs that inevitably come with pro baseball.

"Coach Bradley has been such an influence on me," asserted Szymanski, referring to Bradley, who had a nine-year career as a big league catcher.

"He was always there to help. He told me to be prepared for everyday because that would be key if I went on to the pros. This is an everyday thing; you don't get five days between games. You can't live and die with each swing or at bat. I came to Princeton as a raw athlete and he turned me into a baseball player."

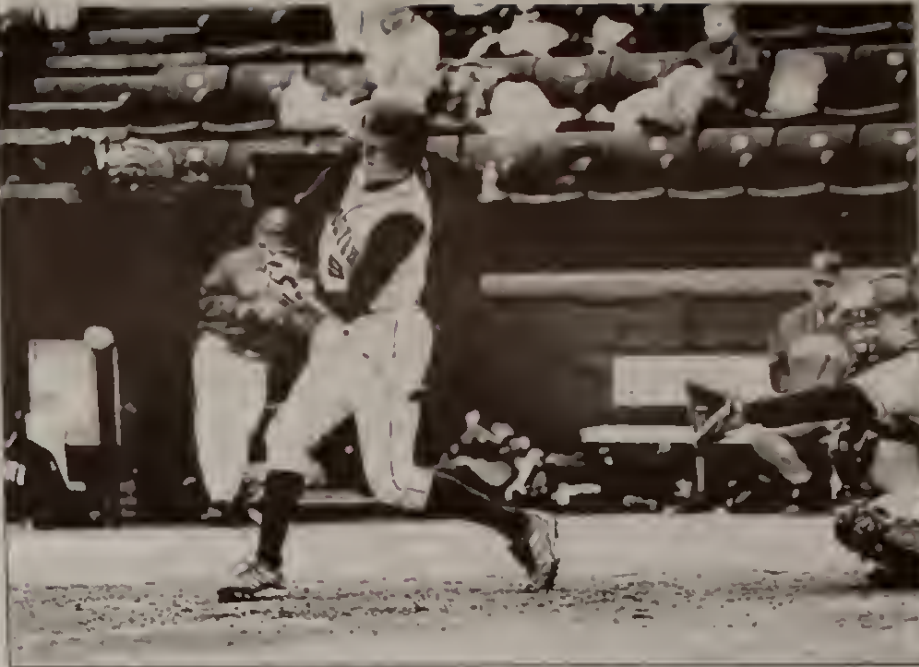

Szymanski's athleticism, which saw him garner honorable mention All-Ivy mention as a receiver for Princeton's football team, complicated his decision to sign with the Reds organization.

By signing a pro contract, he forfeited his senior season with the Tiger football squad under Ivy League rules. While Szymanski's choice in the second round of the MLB draft and the reported $750,000 signing bonus that came with it was too good to pass up, he is wistful when thinking about giving up football.

"Football is extremely important to me and I loved the way Coach [Roger] Hughes treated me and the team," said Szymanski, who had 85 receptions for 1603 yards in his Tiger football career and will be in the stands at Princeton Stadium this fall as he returns to school to finish up his psychology studies.

"I'll never regret the decision I made but I will miss football. It didn't set in that I wasn't going to ever play football again until I was driving out to Billings. I will miss the 2-a-day practices and the camaraderie you build through that."

As Szymanski finishes up his first pro baseball season, he is hoping his current team can forge that same kind of spirit.

LAST LICKS: B.J. Szymanski pounds the ball for the Princeton University baseball team this spring in his junior season which turned out to be his last campaign in a Tiger uniform. Szymanski, also a star receiver for Princeton's football team, hit .362 with six homers and 48 RBIs in 2004 before signing with the Cincinnati Reds organization. The Wichita Falls, Texas native was named as a 2004 first-team All-Ivy performer in baseball after earning honorable mention All-Ivy honors in football the previous fall.

Tiger Men's Soccer Enters Preseason Aiming to Make Every Moment Count

After struggling through a frustrating season last fall, the Princeton University men's soccer team is primed to hit the pitch this week to start its 2004 preseason.

While the Tigers won't be in action for real until they play at Loyola on September 3, head coach Jim Barlow knows his team needs to hit the ground running.

"The seven-day preseason could make or break us," said Barlow, whose club went 6-8-3 in 2003 as it finished fourth in Ivy League play.

"The question will be how quickly can we get a team shape together and get cohesive defensively. Once we have that down, then we can work on producing goals."

Barlow believes his squad is ready to make the most of every moment of the preseason and beyond.

"I think we realize how fortunate we are to be in this environment," asserted Barlow, an Ivy League Men's Soccer Player of the Year for Princeton in 1990 who is entering his ninth year as the Tiger head coach. "We're not going to take any day for granted this fall."

In Barlow's view, senior captain Teddy van Beuren will play a key role in making sure the Tigers keep their collective nose to the grindstone.

"Teddy is trying to get every guy to work hard and to take more responsibility for preparation and being team players," said Barlow, who acknowledged that his team learned some hard lessons on and off the field in 2003.

"He's an unselfish guy who puts the team first and he just doesn't stop working on the field. When we've been successful in the past, it's when the team has had that unselfish attitude."

The Tigers will need to work together if they are to overcome the lack of goal production that plagued them last fall. In 2003, Princeton scored just 17 goals for the season and was shut out on six occasions.

"Darren Spicer and Adrian Melville will be our key guys up top," explained Barlow, referring to his junior strikers. "They are athletic guys who make plays with their work rate. They don't necessarily create goals on their own so we need the midfield to be the link so we have a more balanced attack. Guys like Teddy, Ryan Rich, and Alex Reison have to step up."

Others who figure in the midfield mix include senior Doug Hare, juniors Ben Young and Sean Paylor, together with sophomores James Honhau and Zach Schwarz.

Despite the loss of All-Ivy defender Jeff Hare to graduation, Barlow has high hopes for his back line. "Jeff was pivotal for us but we had moved him up front by the end of last season," recalled Barlow. "The backs played well, Jame Wunsch, Neil Chaudhuri, and Marc DuBois did fine."

The Tigers' crew of incoming freshmen could make their presence felt along the back line. "We have some big, strong guys coming in who are athletic enough to handle things," maintained Barlow, referring to such newcomers as Matt Kontos, Victor Noskov, and Princeton High alum Scott Callahan.

Another strength of the team should be goaltending where Barlow has the two solid returning veterans in senior Erik White and junior Bobby Guelich.

"Erik and Bobby are big, athletic, and comfortable in the position," added Barlow, whose club surrendered 28 goals last season with White seeing most of the action as he posted a 1.41 goals against average. "Both have a lot of potential. It should be interesting to see how things play out in the preseason."

The Tigers will need to develop quickly in the preseason as they face stiff tests with the game at Loyola and then a date at Akron on September 10.

"Loyola is opening a new stadium and they have tied us the last four years," said Barlow, who enters the fall with a career mark at Princeton of 62-55-21. "Akron is expecting 5,000 people when they play us since they will be celebrating the 50th anniversary of their program that day. They were in the NCAA Sweet 16 last year."

Those kind of challenges should serve the Tigers well as they gird themselves for play in the balanced Ivy League where the margin for error is razor thin.

"There is so much parity in the Ivy League," noted Barlow, whose current crop of seniors started their careers in

BACK IN STEP: Princeton University junior defender Neil Chaudhuri kicks the ball away from a Harvard player in action last fall. Chaudhuri and his teammates start preseason training this week, resolved to rebound from the disappointing 6-8-3 mark the program posted in 2003. The Tigers open their 2004 campaign on the road with a game at Loyola on September 3 followed by a trip to Akron on September 10.

2001 by playing on the program's most recent league champion. "You can go for first to eighth and eighth to first in one year."

Barlow, for his part, believes the seniors have cherished our time together. I helped the squad develop a healthy enthusiasm that could see them end their careers with another title.

"We have a new team spirit," asserted Barlow, who also coached Princeton to the Ivy title in 1999. "The players realize the season is so short and goes so fast. We need to cherish our time together. I believe the seniors have cherished our time together. I helped the squad develop a healthy enthusiasm that could see them end their careers with another title."

ALL HANDS ON DECK: Crew members prepare the American Eagle 12-meter yacht for competition earlier this summer. The boat, which was used by Ted Turner in America's Cup competitions in the 1970s, is currently being skippered in yachting regattas by Princeton resident Dr. Tony Chiurco.

Chiurco Going for Yachting Title; Relishes Operating on High Seas

As a longtime neurosurgeon, Dr. Tony Chiurco looks forward to the adrenaline that starts pumping through his system when he performs a delicate operation.

But nothing gives him quite the rush he gets from competing in classic 12-meter yacht races.

Earlier this summer, the Princeton resident skippered his boat, the American Eagle, to the title in the classic 12-meter class at the New York Yacht Club's 150th annual regatta.

In mid-September, Chiurco will shoot for a bigger prize as he captains his boat in the North American championships in a three-day series of races to be held in the coast off Newport, R.I.

Chiurco's eyes light up when he reflects on the challenges that come from racing the classic 12-meter boats which average 65 feet in length and require 17-person crews. The 12-meter designation doesn't refer to the size of the boats but instead is the result of a formula that takes into account the sail area, keel depth, beam girth, and length of the boats.

"My job is keeping the boat in the groove between the jib and main," explained the lanky, affable Chiurco, whose American Eagle boat is the same yacht which Ted Turner sailed when he competed for the America's Cup in the 1970s. "It's very challenging on the water. I get such an adrenaline rush. I'm exhausted afterward, I feel like I just did an aneurysm."

The 12-meter classification came into being in the 1990s after the boat specifications for the America's Cup were changed due to the dispute between the U.S. and New Zealand.

The boats that Chiurco races are the ones used in the America's Cup and other top yachting competitions from the 1950s to the 1990s.

Chiurco, 62, who has been sailing for about 40 years, relishes both the beauty and complexities that come with racing the classic yachts.

"I love the aesthetics of the boats," said Chiurco, who started sailing in the 1960s during his medical residency at the University of Iowa on nearby Lake McBride and then graduated to day-sailing with small boats off the Jersey Shore after moving east.

"I also love dealing with the climate, wind, water, and all the varying conditions. It's like chess on water. The tactics are so essential, it's really cerebral."

Chiurco has a healthy respect for what's involved in racing the 12-meter crafts, particularly considering the major regattas in which he participates typically take place over three days. The competitions involve four to six races which are conducted around buoys on 20-mile courses and take about two hours to complete.

"The 12-meter boats are really close in speed," explained Chiurco, who got involved in racing in the 1980s after buying a 47-foot sloop. "It takes a lot to get the boats to the starting line. You have to have an experienced crew."

Chiurco has a charter arrangement with American Eagle and most of his crew is based in Newport. He said he does get a chance to do some sailing with them between competitions but yacht racing isn't something that can be drilled for since the conditions on the given day play such a big role in the strategy employed. He also has a deck boss who keeps the crew organized during the races.

After finishing second in last year's North American championship regatta, Chiurco is determined to be at his best strategically come next month.

"In 2003, we were tied with Weatherly for first going into the last race and I made a tactical error," admitted Chiurco. "I didn't cover her. The boat that makes the least mistakes is the one that generally wins. I didn't sleep the night before the race."

You can bet that Chiurco will be looking forward to more sleepless nights as he deals with the adrenaline that will be prompted by going for the North American title.

—Bill Alden

College football fans just might be the most fanatic of all, and perhaps nowhere more so than at the University of Nebraska. Entering the 2004 season, the Huskers had filled their 73,918 seat stadium 262 consecutive games. No other school was even at 200. The streak goes back more than 40 years, to November 2, 1962. Of course, the team has given its fans good reason to be supportive. In 25 years during that period, former coach Tom Osborne never won less than nine games. And in 1995, when Nebraska went undefeated and won one of its three national titles under Osborne, the Huskers were behind in games for a grand total of only a little over 13 minutes during the entire season.

During the 2004 season, Arizona's Randy Johnson became the fourth pitcher in major league history to rack up more than 4,000 strikeouts, joining Nolan Ryan, Steve Carlton and Roger Clemens — all of whom overlapped each other at some point in their careers. Yet surprisingly only one big leaguer struck out against all four. Want a hint? He spent most of his career in San Francisco. The player was outfielder Chili Davis.

Every November since 1970, New York City has hosted a marathon. The 2003 version had nearly 35,000 participants, but in that inaugural year, a mere 127 runners took part. Running exploded in the last couple decades of the 20th Century, and these days everybody seems to be on the run — even 100-year-olds. In fact, in July of 2004, south African Philip Rabinowitz set the record for fastest 100-meter run by a 100-year-old person. His mark: 30.86 seconds. Rabinowitz already held the record for world's oldest competitive walker.

Princeton Men's Basketball To Play in Sun Bowl

The Princeton University men's basketball team said last week that it will join host UTEP, Tulane, and Alabama State in the field for the 44th State Farm Sun Bowl Basketball Tournament December 27-28, 2004, at the Don Haskins Center in El Paso, Texas.

The host Miners will meet Alabama State in the first semifinal on December 27 while the Tigers and Tulane meet in the second game.

The consolation/championship doubleheader will take place on December 28. The Sun Bowl Basketball Tournament is the oldest continuous holiday championship tournament in the nation.

Princeton won the Sun Bowl Tournament in its only other appearance (1996) in the event. The Tigers defeated Texas A&M and host UTEP that year to win the championship.

This year's tournament features three teams that reached the NCAA tournament last season. Alabama State won the Southwestern Athletic Conference (SWAC) title in 2003-04, UTEP nearly upset Maryland in last year's NCAA first round and the Tigers won the Ivy League title to advance to their 23rd NCAA tournament. Tulane finished 11-17 overall and 4-12 in Conference USA last season, but returns four starters and eight letter winners from a year ago.

The full Princeton men's basketball schedule for 2004-05 will be released by early September.

Tiger Water Polo Team Names Ellingson to Staff

The Princeton University water polo team said last week that Derek Ellingson, a former All-America water polo player and the 2002 Eastern Coach of the Year at Queens College, has been named as the men's and women's assistant water polo coach under seven-year head coach Luis Nicolao.

Ellingson enters his first year at Princeton as an experienced and accomplished water polo coach and player. He spent the last five years coaching at his alma mater Queens, first as an assistant and then as the men's and women's head coach.

Born in San Francisco, Ellingson was a high school All-American in water polo before graduating in 1991. In his senior year, he also started coaching the high school girls' team that was league champion. Ellingson became the junior varsity swim coach at Monte Vista in 1992, when it won the J.V. league championship.

Ellingson received an associates degree from Grossmont College in 1996 before attending Queens. At Queens, Ellingson helped the 1996 squad win the Northern Division and finish second at Easterns. The following year, Queens finished first at Northern and Easterns and third at the National Championship, marking the first time an East Coast team finished higher than fourth. That year Ellingson was named All-American.

Ellingson began coaching at his alma mater in 1999 as an assistant and became the head coach in 2000. He was the women's New York Division Coach of the Year in his first year when Queens won the New York Division Championship and finished sixth at Easterns.

On the men's side, Queens finished fourth at Easterns in 2000 and second in 2001, when it also won Northern and Ellingson earned Northern Coach of the Year honors. The men had their best season the following year, winning championships at Northern, ECACs and Easterns, and finishing third at Nationals. Ellingson was named the 2002 Eastern Coach of the Year. That same year Ellingson earned the Northeast Zone Elite Men's Coach of the Year award.

"VOLCANOES KILLING TREES IN NEW JERSEY"

This is the wrong way to use mulch around a tree. Never pile mulch against bark! Mulch volcanoes are killing our trees! Where might we find these volcanoes? They could be right in your own backyard. We are referring to excess mulch piled high into a cone or mound around tree trunks. These mulch volcanoes are killing trees and wasting money on excess material. Volcanoes are bad!

What do I need to know to mulch trees the right way?

- Start six inches from the tree trunk at ground level and mulch outward to the edge of the dripline to a maximum depth of two inches to four inches.
- Keep a two-inch to four-inch layer around, but not touching the base of the tree. Mulch as much of the area under a tree as possible without having mulch touch the trunk.
- Never pile-up a cone of mulch around the tree trunk! Mice, insects, and fungus may hide next to the trunk and feed on parts of the tree. The cone-shaped mulch piles and thick layers of mulch also prevent water from reaching a tree's roots. Tree roots that grow up into the cone of mulch on top of the soil cannot be healthy.
- One layer of woven Landscape Fabric may be used under mulch in heavy weed areas. Never use plastic sheets under the mulch. Plastic sheets block the passage of air and water and stunt root growth.

For more information or consultation regarding any volcanoes on your property or any other issues concerning your valuable trees please call WOODWINDS 924-3500.

Princeton Women's Lacrosse Taps DeJulius For Staff

Michele DeJulius, a three-time first-team All-America at Penn State in the mid-1990's and a member of the United States Elite Team since 1994, has been named an assistant women's lacrosse coach at Princeton University, the program said last week.

DeJulius, 29, replaces Keely McDonald, who became the scholastic outreach program head coach at Brown University last month. She will be involved in all aspects of the program, including recruiting and skill development, and support of "National Girls, will work specifically with the Tigers' attack unit.

A native of Baltimore, DeJulius joins the collegiate coaching ranks after four years as a member of the Baltimore City Police Department. Joining that department in 2000, DeJulius spent time as a patrol and tactical officer before moving into the detective ranks, most recently as a detective with the Executive Protection Unit in May of this year.

DeJulius also founded The Ultimate Goal Lacrosse Club, based in Philadelphia, which develops and organizes clinics, camps and tournaments for adolescent and high-school-age players.

A member of the U.S. Elite team for the last 11 years, DeJulius has participated in numerous international competitions with that team. She also played for Team Black, coached by Sailer, in the "Versus" Professional Exhibition games in 2003.

DeJulius finished her career at Penn State eighth on the school's all-time list with 142 goals and sixth in program history with 203 points. She was an IWFLCA first-team All-America in 1995, 1996, and 1997 and led the Nittany Lions to the 1995 NCAA semifinals.

Tyco, Princeton Athletics In Partnership Agreement

Princeton University Athletics has entered into a three-year corporate partnership agreement with Tyco International.

The agreement secures Tyco as a lead partner of many of the prominent community outreach programs supported by Princeton Athletics.

Elements of the agreement include: lead partnership of the new "Tiger Tickets on Tyco" program, a community outreach activity which offers free football, basketball, ice hockey, and lacrosse tickets to local deserving community organizations; support of the "Reading with the Tigers" program; an interactive community sports fair for local girls which precedes a Princeton women's basketball game.

Tyco International Ltd., with headquarters in Princeton, a global, diversified company that provides vital products and services to customers in five business segments: fire and security, electronics, healthcare, engineered products and services, and plastics and adhesives. Tyco employs 260,000 people worldwide and had a 2003 revenue of $37 billion.

"This partnership is a great opportunity for Princeton Athletics," Princeton Director of Athletics Gary Walters said. "We are very proud of our community outreach programs and partnering with a corporation such as Tyco will allow us to sustain and expand our current efforts."

Charlie Young, Tyco's Senior Vice President and Chief Marketing Officer, said the partnership represents Tyco's dedication to the Princeton community, which is home to the company's new world headquarters. "It makes sense for Tyco to partner with Princeton Athletics, given our organizations' shared commitment of giving back to the community," said Young.

"At Tyco, we strive to be a good corporate citizen, and that means contributing, financially as well as through volunteerism, to organizations dedicated to improving the communities where our employees live and work. There is no doubt that Princeton Athletics, with its many educational and sports endeavors aimed at enriching the lives of youth, is such an organization."

OBITUARIES

Pendleton Herring

Pendleton Herring, 100, of Princeton, died August 17 at his home at The Windrows. A longtime Princeton resident, he was an influential political scientist and foundation executive.

The author of six books, he had, according to Austin Ranney in the International Encyclopedia of Social Sciences, "greater influence on social science than anyone in his generation."

Born in Baltimore, he earned B.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Johns Hopkins University. He joined the faculty of arts and sciences at Harvard University in 1928. While serving at Harvard as a professor, he was also appointed Secretary of the Harvard Graduate School of Public Administration in 1936. During that decade he developed the case method of teaching public administration, which grew into the Inter-University Case Program in Public Administration.

From 1942 to 1947, he served as a consultant to the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, working with the Bureau of the Budget as an adviser on the records of war administration and on advisory committees for the unification of the Army, Navy, and Air Force. He was awarded the Navy Citation and Distinguished Civilian Service Award in 1946.

He left Harvard in 1946 to head the Atomic Energy Commission, and went on to become president of the Social Science Research Council in 1945, a position he held for two decades. Under his leadership, the SSRC sought to make the social sciences more rigorous and systematic by encouraging the use of quantitative methods and systematic theories. The SSRC was influential in transforming his field of political science from a largely legal and philosophical discipline to a behavioral science that drew on the methods and theories of sociology, psychology, and anthropology. After retiring from the SSRC, he directed the Foreign Area Fellowship Program, which provided fellowships for graduate study abroad.

His first book, Group Representatives in Congress (1929), was a pioneering effort based on interviews with representatives of labor unions, farmers, and business leaders. The Politics of Democracy (1940) argued the case for decentralized parties in American government rather than parties of greater discipline and purity. Presidential Leadership: The Political Relations of Congress and the Chief Executive (1940) offered an evaluation of the American presidency and the factors that influence executive-Congressional relations. The Impact of War: American Democracy Under Arms (1941), an analysis of American war mobilization, was widely regarded as an important synthesis of civil-military relations.

The recipient of two honorary doctorates, one from Princeton University (LL.D., 1958) and the other from Johns Hopkins University (LL.D., 1968), Mr. Herring was also given the Charles E. Merriam Award in 1979 and the Madison Medal in 1987 by the American Political Science Association. Johns Hopkins also presented him with the Woodrow Wilson Award for Distinguished Government Service in 2000.

He was the president of the American Political Science Association in 1952-53, chair of the Social Science Advisory Committee of the National Science Association, and a founder of the Woodrow Wilson Center for Scholars in Washington, D.C. Following his 1968 retirement from the SSRC, he became president of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, which supported the publication of the papers of Woodrow Wilson. He was also founding editor of the Public Opinion Quarterly, served as editor in chief of Public Administration Review, and was on the editorial board of the American Political Science Review.

A member of the Cosmos Club and the Century Club, he had wide-ranging avocational interests. He wrote two volumes of poetry, and his paintings were frequently hung in the members' show at the Century Club.

His first wife, Katharine Minot Channing, died in 1969. In 1971, he married Virginia Stamen Wood, who survives him along with his sons, James of Princeton and Thomas of Wareham, Mass.; a brother, Arthur of Cincinnati, Ohio; five grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren.

Philip K. Baltzer

Philip K. Baltzer, 80, of Raleigh, N.C., died August 20 in the presence of his wife, son and brother. The cause of death was cancer.

Formerly of Princeton, he retired to Raleigh in 1991.

Born in Quincy, Mass., he served in the Army in World War II, primarily in France. He then went on to pursue a passion for knowledge and a full family life.

He received his B.S. in electrical engineering from Northeastern University, an M.S. in electrical engineering from M.I.T., and Ph.D. in physics from Rutgers University.

He worked at RCA Laboratories in Princeton as a senior research scientist. During his time with RCA, he spent five years in Tokyo, Japan, as the director of the RCA research laboratory.

Because of his deep Christian faith and comprehensive knowledge of the Bible, he believed in setting a strong Christian example and sharing his faith with others. In that capacity, he served as an elder for many years at West-erly Road Church in Princeton.

He was an adventurous man who enjoyed the sea and travel. An avid sailor and swimmer, he spent summers at Long Beach Island, and later at a second home in St. Thomas, V.I. He enjoyed many opportunities to travel throughout the world. He also pursued interests in genealogy, stock trading, technology, and the study of Islam/Iraq; and enjoyed competing at bridge, Rummikub, cribbage, and chess.

He is survived by his wife of 60 years, Louise; four children, Russell of Ocean Isle, N.C., Helen Felts of Denville, N.J., Heidi Pavea of St. Charles, Ill., and Valerie Beninson of Raleigh; a brother, Robert of Livermore, Calif.; and ten grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held this Friday, August 27, at 11 a.m. at Bay Leaf Baptist Church, 12200 Bay Leaf Church Road, Raleigh.

Funeral arrangements are by Brown-Wynne Funeral Home, Millbrook Road, Raleigh, N.C. (919-876-6900).

Miriam C. Reed

Miriam C. Reed, M.D., 87, of Pennswood Village, Newton, Pa., died August 12 at Pennswood Village. She had been a longtime Lawrenceville resident before her recent move to Pennswood Village.

Born in Newark and raised in Maplewood, N.J., she graduated from Cornell University in 1937 and Women's Medical College of Pennsylvania in 1948. Her internship at Baltimore City Hospital was followed by a residency in dermatology at The Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. After completing her residency she returned to New Jersey to enter the practice of medicine in dermatology in Princeton. Presented by
Roberta E. Scharff, PT
TO A WOMAN'S ADVANTAGE

Research indicates that women have a decided advantage in ultra-endurance events because they are able to draw on energy reserves of fat more readily than men. Studies also show that estrogen may provide women with the advantage of being less prone to soreness after exercise. Exercisers know that dull pain and stiffness often set in 6-12 hours after exercise. The soreness generally reaches its highest level 24-36 hours later, and causes a loss of strength and mobility. This soreness is likely due to exercise-induced microtears in the muscle tissue. Research shows that estrogen may help women avoid this muscle damage by protecting muscle, which may provide an edge that may help women endure longer exercise sessions than men.

To schedule a consultation, call THE REHABILITATION CENTER at 732-329-1181 or see us in Princeton at 155 Raymond Road (Buckingham Place Facility). A graduate of Wagner College, Cathie Hesson, RN, has over 25 years of experience in the field of nursing, and we welcome her diverse talents to our team. Day, evening and Saturday hours are available. Please call to schedule the initial evaluation and treatment.

Please send your questions or comments to my office or e-mail me at:

P.S. Muscle soreness is an indicator that muscles have been stimulated to grow stronger and more resilient.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Tod Peyton

DON'T MARKET YOUR HOUSE BEFORE IT'S READY

Listing your home for sale before doing the necessary preparation can be a costly mistake. Sellers who put their homes on the market before making essential repairs usually wait longer for the home to sell, and it usually sells for less.

Some sellers reduce the sales price to compensate for less-than-attractive conditions or credit the buyers at the closing for needed repairs. This approach is only attractive to buyers who are looking for a bargain and have the time and skills to fix up a property. Most buyers can't visualize a home's potential, have little remodeling experience, and are turned off by the thought of such a project.

The first time your home is seen by the public is the best chance you have to sell your home. You should wait until your home looks its best before showing it to anyone except your Realtor. Your agent can tell you how to prepare your property for the market and will happily promote your attractive and well-maintained home to buyers and other Realtors. You may want to sign a listing agreement a week or two before you are ready to show so your Realtor can place ads and begin marketing, but don't open it to the public until it shows well.

For dependable individual advice on buying or selling real estate, call Tod Peyton, Realtor or any Peyton Associate at 921-1550. Please feel free to stop by my office at 343 Nassau Street in Princeton.

Reclaim Your Basement

A basement is versatile – They're used for storage space, workshops, and entertainment. But when musty smells, mold, and mildew creep in, a basement loses its usefulness. Residential dehumidifiers often cause as many problems as they solve... running constantly or overflowing easily.

Over the years, many of our customers have asked about dehumidifiers, but we've never found one worthy of offering... until now. The Santa Fe dehumidifier provides humidity control, air filtration, has a high water removal capacity and is extremely efficient.

Customers who have installed them have found that their basements are amazingly dry. Dampness and musty smells are gone and clothes, books, and paintings can be stored with confidence.

The Santa Fe dehumidifier comes with a money back guarantee if you are not satisfied. For more information call us at 609-799-3434. Reclaim your basement today.

Princeton Teen Kaitlin McCarthy Participates in Irish Way Program

Not only is Kaitlin McCarthy Irish through and through — on both sides of the family tree — she is also a keen observer of Irish history, culture, and traditions, having traveled to the land of her ancestors on numerous occasions.

Most recently, she spent five weeks on the Emerald Isle as part of the Irish Way Program, an educational opportunity for American high school students, sponsored by the Irish American Cultural Institute of Morristown, N.J. The program, which began 29 years ago, has 3,000 alumni across the U.S.

Daughter of John and Robin McCarthy, Kaitlin was born and brought up in Princeton, and will be a junior this September at Stuart Country Day School of The Sacred Heart. She applied for the Irish Way Program last January, and after filling out a lengthy application, she was one of 87 high school students across the country to be accepted.

"I answered questions about my interests, whether I had traveled abroad, etc.," explains Kaitlin. "I heard I was accepted in March. Then, we left the end of June for Dublin. Actually, I had just come back from England and Scotland, where I was touring with the Tartan Tones, Stuart's singing group. But I came back because I wanted to travel with the Irish Way group from the beginning."

Arriving in Ireland, Kaitlin's journey began at King's Hospital, a school in Dublin, where the students took classes in Irish studies and folklore, Irish (Gaelic) language, Irish and American history, music, literature, dance, and sports. Classes were conducted by five Irish certified secondary school teachers, assisted by five American college graduates, all Irish Way alumni.

"We were there nine days," reports Kaitlin. "It was a boarding school environment, which was new to me."

"Home Stay"

While in Dublin, the students also toured the city, attended a play at the famous Abbey Theatre, and watched a hurling match, a traditional Irish sport.

A highlight of the trip was the "Home Stay". All students spend a week with an Irish family where they have the opportunity to live and learn in a different cultural environment. Kaitlin stayed with a family in Tralee.

"The family had a dairy farm, and I enjoyed walking around the land," she recalls. "Ireland is very green, all shades of green. It was wonderful. The host family was new to the Irish Way Program, and they were very nice and friendly. The food was very traditional — lots of potatoes served many different ways!"

More studies, field trips, and recreational activities were in store as the students arrived at Newtown Boarding School in Waterford. While there, they toured the Waterford Crystal factory, and also visited the 5,000 year-old site of Newgrange, an ancient grave passage and burial chamber, which pre-dates the Egyptian Pyramids.

In addition to attending 75 hours of classes, students were required to keep a notebook containing their class and field trip notes, journal entries, short writing assignments, etc., which they submitted for evaluation at the end of the academic portion of the program. Kaitlin received an "A" for her notebook.

Each student also participated in a small group presentation in the form of a skit about an historic Irish personality, literary figure, or event. They each researched and wrote an essay on one aspect of their subject's life, and the skits were written and produced entirely by teams of seven to 10 students for presentation to the entire group of students and staff.

Irish Pirate

"My group's presentation was on Grace O' Malley, a famous Irish female pirate during the time of Queen Elizabeth I," reports Kaitlin. "We researched her story, and then presented our skit, which was really fun."

The latter part of the trip was highlighted by a four-day stay in Galway, starting at Gort na Coiribe, followed by a tour of the west coast, including the Aran Islands, Cliffs of Moher, and Connemara region.

"Galway was my favorite place," says Kaitlin. "The atmosphere was different from the other places. It was very comfortable and appealing. We lived in an apartment complex there, and I liked that. Also, there was no studying!"

Other special features of the trip were watching the dog races — very popular in Ireland — and participating in the Irish dances.

"We had a half hour of dancing every day. The dances were fun to learn," reports Kaitlin. "I had done Irish dancing before but always individually. This was different because it was group dancing with boys and girls. Everyone enjoyed it."

The students also went to Cork and kissed the Blarney Stone, an experience which is said to provide the gift of eloquence.

Most of the students on the trip were of Irish heritage, but not all, says Kaitlin.

"I made some good friends on the trip, and I will keep in touch with them," she adds. "I will also be writing an article about the experience for my school paper."

Potato Famine

Kaitlin's interest in her Irish heritage remains strong, and she remembers that her great-great-grandfather, Michael Hickey, arrived in the U.S. in 1846 at the age of one, having left County Clare in the midst of the great Potato Famine. There are still relatives in Ireland today, and her father, Princeton attorney, John McCarthy III holds dual American and Irish citizenship.

In addition, Kaitlin has a wide range of other interests, including writing for Stuart's newspaper, "The Tartan", singing with the Tartan Tones, performing in school plays, playing squash, and reading for pleasure, especially fiction.

She looks forward to following her sister Megan and brother John to college, perhaps to study English language, American history, and psychology. In the meantime, she plans to enjoy Stuart for the next two years, while reflecting on the experience of spending five weeks in Ireland, learning about the people and the culture firsthand.

"The program did a really good job of letting us see how the Irish people live. It was a great opportunity to live among people of a different culture, and it expanded our horizons. It is something I will always remember. It was really special."

—Jean Stratton

KYLEMORE ABBEY: This famous lakeside castle is one of the sites visited by Kaitlin McCarthy and the other students on their trip to Ireland with the Irish Way Program. Built in the 19th century and located in County Galway, it is now a girls' boarding school run by Benedictine nuns. It is also known for its cream earthenware pottery, hand decorated and fired at the abbey.

Family Advice Column:

BACK TO SCHOOL BACK TO BEING OVERLOADED?

By the Rev. Peter K. Stimpson

The Rev. Peter K. Stimpson

QUESTION: Oh God, the kids are going back to school, and schlepping them from activity to activity has them and me absolutely overloaded! Can you help me?

ANSWER:

1. STRESS IN MY CHILD?

Are you pushing your child too hard? Some parents, with the best of intentions, may unwittingly over-schedule their children in the hope of giving them an edge over their peers in our competitive society. Sadly, 1 out of 3 children suffer from stress-related illnesses.

2. SIGNS OF OVERLOAD: The goal is not to avoid structured time, but rather to not overdo it. Here are some behavioral signs of overload: physical symptoms (headache, stomachache), being tired and failing asleep in class, being irritable and agitated, grades dropping, cheating on tests, less interest in activities, preferring to stay home and being more dependent on you.

3. SOLUTIONS:

- Find a Balance: Limit the number of activities, providing time to play and just "be a kid".
- Realize the Benefits of Play: Encourages creativity & independent problem solving, improves social skills, and relieves stress.
- Take a Day of Rest: Make 1 day per week free of activities, giving you and your children a well-deserved break --- sort of a non-religious Sabbath.
- Choose Gifted Programs that are Gifted: More work, but less creativity, will make matters worse.
- Choose Sports that Build Self-Esteem: While teaching teamwork and cooperation are fine, equating worth with performance, and having a coach or teammates who berate your child are not. Ask your child the simple question: Are you having fun?
- Examine Yourself: Is your child overloaded because you are overloaded? Consider escaping pressure yourself rather than feeding it to your child. Being pushed to be the smartest, most athletic, fashionable, thin and popular kid in the class has been shown to push kids away from being happy. Perhaps examining your own view of life might help.

4. A GOOD BOOK: Want more? Consider reading: Dr. David Marks, Raising Stable Kids in an Unstable World, Deerfield Beach, Health Communications, 2002.

This Wellness column is funded through the generosity of a grant from the J. Seward Johnson, Sr. Charitable Trusts. # Anxiety Disorders: Battling With Back-to-School Blues

We all remember the butterflies in the pit of our stomach and the concoction of emotions when going back to school. Our own children feel these same emotions as their summer draws to an end and they make the transition back to school. This period of time can be especially difficult if the child is beginning at a new middle or high school. Often when a child has a continued fear of going to school it is more than just the "jitters." According to the Anxiety Disorders Association of America (ADAA), "school refusal is often a symptom of a deeper problem and if not treated can have a negative impact on social skills, self-confidence, coping skills and, of course, education."

Back-to-school anxiety affects children of all ages, but recent studies show that as many as one in 10 young people may have an anxiety disorder (U.S. Department of Health & Human Services). Anxiety disorders are an illness that is continually addressed.

"If your child has trouble going back to school, they may display different types of behavior that is negative. This can be as simple as refusing to get up in the morning to make the school bus," said Howard Kaplan M.Ed., assistant director of the East Mountain School located at Carrier Clinic. "Parents need to find out and communicate with their child; they need to take a look at their child's academic, social and authority figures, to identify the problems in these areas."

Creating a positive experience for a child going back to school is important to ensure a good school year and lessen the anxiety he or she may feel. Although the butterfly feeling students feel can last a few days, it is important to look for behavioral changes. If noticeable behavioral changes exist, a parent should have a discussion with his or her child to review their child's reservations.

Anxiety disorders affect both children and adults, and can fill an individual's life with an overwhelming feeling of anxiety and fear. For children, stressful life events such as starting school can trigger an anxiety disorder.

According to the ADAA, "Research has shown that if left untreated, children with anxiety disorders are at a higher risk to perform poorly in school, to have less developed social skills and to be more vulnerable to substance abuse."

The National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) recommends that a visit to your primary care physician is the best place to start. A physician can help determine whether the symptoms are due to an anxiety disorder, a mental medical condition, or both. The next step for treatment is a referral to a mental health professional.

Establishing Communication

Communication between parents, children and teachers is a key ingredient that assists in easing the change of going back to school. Parents should feel free to communicate with their child's teacher if they have questions or concerns. Often if these concerns are left unattended, the problem could become worse.

Moreover, making the adjustment from elementary to middle school can be an overwhelming experience for children; this can include a change of classes throughout the day and learning to use lockers. Schools often host orientation for students and parents which allows students a chance to meet their new teachers and adjust to the new school building.

"At East Mountain School we offer new students a chance to meet their teachers and visit their new school," said Kaplan. "If the students are anxious, the opportunity to adjust before school begins enables them to feel more comfortable within their environment."

Time management is another important key to success in school. Parents can help their child learn how to record their homework assignments, tests, and meetings in a calendar book. Students should also learn how much homework time that they are expected to fulfill each evening. By creating a steady after school routine, students can learn to set aside a certain amount of time each evening before watching their favorite show on television or after eating dinner.

In high school, the expectations increase and adolescents feel more competition among peers due to athletics and an increase in homework. These expectations are especially tough for freshman as they learn how to juggle the many new tasks before them. Finding a sense of belonging can be perhaps a teen's most troubled fear.

"Will I make a friend?" "What will they think of me?" "Do I dress okay?" are questions teenagers often ask themselves on their first day back. Finding friends through extracurricular clubs or sports can help freshmen or new students to make friends that can help them adjust to their new school.

"School jitters" is a very normal feeling for children heading back to school, but if the anxiety is prolonged it can cause both physical and mental problems. If suspicious that a child is having problems with anxiety it is important to contact the primary care physician.

How Parents Can Promote Children to Read at Home

Sharon Goldman, Principal of Community Park School offers the following suggestions on how parents can encourage children to read at home:

Set a good example as a reader — let kids see you reading every day.

Get a subscription in his or her name to an age appropriate magazine for your child. When relatives and others ask for gift ideas, suggest magazine subscriptions, books or a bookstore gift certificate.

Make reading fun — a time that you and your children look forward to spending together.

Keep lots of books, magazines, and newspapers around the house.

Visit the library often and shop for books at garage and yard sales, swap meets and used bookstores.

Infants and Toddlers:

Snuggle together as you read.

Emphasize rhythms and rhymes in stories. Give your toddler opportunities to repeat rhyming phrases.

Make reading a habit for bedtime, after lunch or after nap time.

Give your child a chance to choose his or her own books.

Read stories again and again.

Young School Age Children:

Keep reading to your child even when he or she can read independently.

Talk with your child about favorite authors and help the child find additional books by those authors.

Take turns reading a story with your child.

Older School Age Children:

Ask your child to compare a book to another familiar book. How are the characters alike or different? Do the stories take place in similar settings? How are the illustrations the same or different.

Ask what part of the story or book your child liked best and why.

Ask if your child liked the ending of the story. Why or why not?

Protecting The Teeth Of Young Athletes

According to the American Dental Association, one way to reduce the chances of damaging teeth, is to wear mouth guards when participating in sports. Mouth protectors, which typically cover the upper teeth, can cushion a blow to the face, minimizing the risk of broken teeth and injuries to the soft tissues of the mouth.

There are three different types of mouth protectors available — stock, boil and bite, or custom fitted.

Stock mouth protectors are inexpensive and come pre-formed, ready to wear. They often don't fit very well, can be bulky and might make breathing and talking difficult.

Boil and bite mouth protectors can be purchased at many sporting goods stores and may offer a better fit than stock mouth protectors. They should be softened in water, then inserted and allowed to adapt to the shape of your mouth. The directions need to be followed carefully in order to get a good fit.

Custom fitted mouth protectors are made by the dentist to fit your child's mouth. This type is more expensive than the other versions but they offer a better fit. Children with braces need to see their dentist or orthodontist to get advice on a mouth protector. The dentist may suggest a mouth protector for the lower teeth also.

Accidents do happen, and knowing what to do when one occurs can mean the difference between saving and losing a tooth. The American Dental Association offers the following tips when dealing with dental emergencies:

Bitten Lip or Tongue: Clean the area gently with a cloth and apply cold compresses to reduce any swelling. If the bleeding doesn't stop, go to a hospital emergency room immediately.

Broken Tooth: Have the child rinse his or her mouth out with warm water to clean the area. Use cold compresses on the area to keep any swelling down. Call the dentist immediately.

Cracked Tooth: A blow to the mouth can cause a microscopic crack which isn't visible but later results in pain. Sometimes it is difficult to determine which tooth hurts or whether it is an upper or lower tooth. Pressure from biting can cause the crack to open and when the pressure is released, a sharp pain results when the crack closes. If the crack irritates the pulp, the tooth might become sensitive to temperature extremes. Ignoring the pain will make the situation worse. A prompt visit to the dentist is needed to determine the best treatment.

Knocked Out Tooth: Hold the tooth by the crown and rinse off the root of the tooth in water if it is dirty. Do not scrub it or remove any attached tissue fragments. If possible, gently insert and hold the tooth in its socket. If that isn't possible, put the tooth in a cup of milk and take your child to the dentist as quickly as possible. Remember to take the tooth with you.

For additional information, contact your family dentist.

MCCC to Offer Art Classes at Artworks

Mercer County Community College (MCCC) will begin offering credit and noncredit fine art classes at Artworks in Trenton this fall. The result will be additional course offerings with some of the best art instructors in the region, according to Tricia Fagan, MCCC Gallery curator and coordinator of Mercer's Artworks program.

Ms. Fagan describes the variety and depth of the class offerings. "It's a great assortment for both beginning and established artists. There are introductory classes in painting, drawing, and pastels as well as more specialized classes for artists seeking to work with a new instructor or looking for a chance to experiment in a different medium."

Among the specialized classes are bookbinding, large format photography, printmaking, portrait and figure painting, watercolor painting, photo silk-screen, and mixed media collage, painting with encaustic, model making, and resin casting. ### Insurance Coverage For College Students

Health insurance is a must for college students, according to the Professional Insurance Agents of New Jersey (PIANJ). Most group health plans continue to provide coverage for single, financially dependent, full-time students until they reach 23. If this is the case, students need to have insurance cards in their possession and be aware of the type of coverage they have and if there are any co-payments.

Parents should check their homeowners policy to see if the things their child is taking off to school are covered if lost or stolen. Parents should prepare and maintain a list of possessions such as computers, televisions, stereos, cameras, jewelry, including original cost and purchase date. If the value of these items exceeds the off premises coverage limit of your homeowners policy, then additional coverage is needed.

Auto insurance is another consideration for college bound kids. If your child is attending school more than 100 miles from home, without custody of a household vehicle, you might be eligible for a reduction in auto insurance premiums. If your child has custody of a vehicle at school, then the insurer may want to rate your insurance, based on where the vehicle is garaged.

PIANJ is a trade association representing professional, independent insurance agencies, brokerages and their employees throughout New Jersey. For additional information, visit www.pianj.org/NJ.

What's New This Fall At the Chapin School

National Safety Council's School Bus Safety Tips

Although drivers of all vehicles are required to stop for a school bus when it is stopped to load or discharge passengers, children should not rely on them to do so. The National Safety Council encourages parents to teach their youngsters these rules for getting on and off the school bus:

When waiting for the bus, stay away from traffic and avoid roughhousing or other behavior that can lead to carelessness. Do not stray onto streets, alleys, or private property.

Line up away from the street or road as the school bus approaches. Wait until the bus has stopped and the door opens before stepping onto the bus.

Use the hand rail when stepping onto the bus.

When on the bus, find a seat and sit down. Loud talking or other noise can distract the bus driver and is not allowed. Never put head, arms, or hands out of the window.

Keep aisles clear of books or bags which are tripping hazards and can block the way in an emergency.

Before reaching your stop, get ready to leave by getting your books and belongings together.

At your stop, wait for the bus to stop completely before getting up from your seat. Then, walk to the front door and exit, using the hand rail.

If you have to cross the street in front of the bus, walk at least ten feet ahead of the bus along the side of the road until you can turn around and see the driver. Make sure that the driver can see you. Wait for a signal from the driver before beginning to cross. When the driver signals, walk across the road, keeping an eye out for sudden traffic changes.

Do not cross the center line of the road until the driver has signaled that it is safe for you to begin walking.

Stay away from the bus' rear wheels at all times.

For additional safety tips, visit www.nsc.org/library.

Learning Center Helps With School Anxiety

As September approaches, some children might be reluctant or even frightened about returning to the classroom. The specially trained teachers and personal attention offered at a learning center can give a child a much needed shot of self esteem to start the new year.

According to Dr. Raymond Huntington, founder and president of Huntington Learning Center, it is natural for children to experience some anxiety when entering a new classroom environment. However, he says, "When anxiety turns to dread, it is important to find out why and help them move past it. At our learning centers we focus on three building blocks that help a child overcome fear of school: skills, confidence, and motivation."

Skills

Children become frustrated when they cannot keep up with classmates or school assignments due to a lack of basic skills. If a child was having problems at the end of the last school year, the introduction of new material will be even more overwhelming. By working on a child's areas at the learning center, new knowledge can be mastered.

Self Confidence

Without self confidence, a child may not feel capable of success in school. To build a child's confidence, the learning center sets reasonable goals, praising the child's achievements. When children

Motivation

When a child is unmotivated, he or she may be expressing boredom or frustration with the materials being studied. At the Huntington Learning Center, we make learning interesting and encourage parents to look for real world opportunities to show their children the value of schoolwork.

Dr. Huntington adds, "The diagnostic test taken by students at Huntington Learning Center is the first step toward academic success. After diagnosing a child's exact strengths and weaknesses, a customized program of instruction can be prescribed. The goal is to help children reach their full potential."

Students are given individual attention by certified teachers using personalized programs tailored to improve skills in a child's trouble areas. Huntington offers individual testing and tutoring in reading, math, study skills, writing, and SAT/ACT preparation to students of all ages.

As incoming college freshman prepare to leave the comfort and safety of home, they will have one less thing to worry about-meningococcal disease.

New Law Requires Meningococcal Vaccinations for College Freshman in New Jersey

Meningococcal bacteria are deadly organisms that are transmitted from person to person by small droplets in exhaled air. The bacteria can spread from the nose and airways into the blood and throughout the body. The first symptoms are indistinguishable from the common flu and appear after an incubation period of 2 to 10 days. Death from sepsis and infection of the brain and spinal fluid-meningitis-can take place in 2 to 8 hours after the first symptoms begin. The disease occurs more often in the winter and early spring. College students and any group of people living and working closely together are at increase risk. Fortunately there is a vaccine that can immunize an individual from this dangerous bacteria.

The meningococcal vaccination is available at the Centers for Workers Health at St. Francis Medical Center. More more information or to schedule an appointment, please call the Centers for Workers Health at 890-7100 located at AAA Drive, Hamilton.
